Hospital Redevelopment: One Town Gets Residents, The Other Gets Parking

A new development will rise on the 12-acre site of the main campus of the University Medical Center at Princeton (UMCP). There, the two main hospital towers are likely to be converted into somewhere between 229 and 280 residences; a park will stand along Witherspoon Street where medical offices once stood; and shops will line a stretch along Witherspoon moving north from Franklin Avenue, while another shopping strip could line Witherspoon near Henry Avenue.

Although it may not actually run through the development, a new road will provide enough access, planners say, to preclude a "gated community" effect, despite the vocal concerns of neighbors and local activists.

While none of these plans have been approved or even thoroughly designed, they indicate the prospect faced by Princeton Borough and Township governing bodies as new zoning is considered that will, one day, dictate future development on the current hospital site on Witherspoon Street.

Municipal planning for the hospital's anticipated departure for Plainsboro is well into its second year now, and what will take its place once it leaves — in five to seven years according to most estimates — is slowly becoming clear as Princeton's Planning Department, having processed data from myriad public hearings along with residential and municipal feedback, showcases prospective zoning to the Princeton Borough and Township governing bodies, reflecting recent amendments made to the Princeton Community Master Plan.

The site straddles the Borough/Township municipal border, exacerbating an already complicated situation. The two towns have different zoning standards, and, more importantly, two governments that rarely communicate, a fact acknowledged by several elected officials.

Other concerns have arisen. Those living in the immediate vicinity have mostly worried about the height of the hospital buildings, which they think would never have been approved except for medical usage; they feel that a reduction in height should be considered, meaning a removal of at least

Worst Heat Wave of Season Wilts Princeton

As the most severe heat wave of the season grips the Northeast, Nassau Street's freshly paved surface doesn't seem so sturdy anymore.

If you listen closely, you can almost hear the pavement sticking to the soles of your shoes.

With the mercury hovering near 100 degrees on Monday and Tuesday, breaking records throughout the state, there were warnings for those most at risk for injury as summer makes its presence known.

An excessive heat warning that remained in effect until 9 p.m. Tuesday night was issued by the National Weather Service, forecasting heat indices over 100 degrees, when combined with the level of humidity.

Witness the parking lot outside the Community Park Pool Monday evening and it's clear where the coolest place in town was, but this latest bout of summer swelter caused worry among the youngest and oldest residents alike.

On Tuesday, the Princeton Recreation Department moved its Girls Basketball League inside John Witherspoon Middle School. On Monday, the Boys League was also held indoors at the Middle School.

"We are very concerned, and the options we have are not wildly imaginative," said Jack Roberts, executive director of the Recreation Department. "We're maintaining low-activity events, encouraging our day camp to spend a longer period of time at the pool during the lunch hour, and we have the option to take the kids indoors at the Community Park Elementary School." However, that option, Mr. Roberts said, was unlikely as too little airflow inside CP could create conditions more stifling than those outside.

Mr. Roberts voiced a common, but effective antidote: "Drink fluids, get into the shade, and check for heat exhaustion."

Those most at risk are typically small children and the elderly, said Susan Hoskins, executive director of the Princeton Senior Resource Center (PSRC). Ms. Hoskins, who included heat advisory tips in the PSRC June bulletin, recommended that seniors, particularly those taking medication, avoid soda, tea, alcohol, and coffee. Drink plenty of water she said, unless medication is being taken for fluid retention: "That could cause problems," she added. She also advised to stay

Township Creates Corner House Board; Appoints Goerner to Hearon's Seat

Looking for labor-saving measures in oversight for Corner House, the joint-Borough/Township counseling organization for youth and families, Princeton Township Committee unanimously voted Monday night to create a board that will handle governing responsibilities for the 34-year-old agency.

The Township's action will only be effective, however, if Princeton Borough Council enacts a mirror ordinance, which is expected to be up for a vote in the coming weeks.

If passed by both municipalities, the nine-member Corner House board will assume oversight from the 27-member Princeton Alcohol and Drug Alliance (PADA) board. Corner House, whose annual operating budget hovers around $1 million, is too large an entity to be governed by the PADA board, said indoors with the air conditioning on.

Ms. Hoskins said one of the challenges of ensuring senior safety during a heat wave is a concern for the electric bill: "Sometimes, they don't want to use the equipment they have and so we feel it's really important to make sure they use it."

A fan is sufficient if there is no air conditioning, Ms. Hoskins said, but warned against sitting in front of a fan with the windows closed as that could create a "convection oven effect." She also recommended using a fan to blow air out during the day and in at night.

No heat-related emergencies had been reported as of Tuesday, according to Chief Greg Paulson of the Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad, but he emphasized that the Squad's main concern was that people with elderly family members should look in on them regularly.

"It's important to check on the elderly who don't have access to air conditioning or live on their own," he said. Both he and Ms. Hoskins said the PSRC's Suzanne Paterson Center is open to the public and air-conditioned.

Typical symptoms of heat stroke or exhaustion, Mr. Paulson said, are nausea, confusion, and a lack of perspiration: "It's important to understand that a lot of medications taken by older adults reduce the body's ability to cool itself and make them more susceptible to heat emergency," he said.

Dr. Peter Cridge, chief of Emergency Medicine at Princeton HealthCare System, echoed Chief Paulson concerning various medications. Dr. Cridge said to check with a physician to see what could put an individual at greatest risk.

Dr. Cridge said that in the event of a heat stroke, the body can reach temperatures approaching 107 degrees. He said ice packs placed in the groin and under the arms can be effective while emergency services are summoned.

"But ultimately, it's water, water, water: don't wait until you're thirsty," he added.

In the meantime, Princeton may be in for a reprieve as the high temperatures are expected to "plummet" to the mid to high 80s for the remainder of the week.

A Community Bulletin

Princeton University lost $538,000 in state funding due to the recently signed state budget which cut state aid to colleges with an endowment exceeding $1 billion. With an estimated $11 billion overall, the University is the only school in the state whose endowment meets that criterion.

The Princeton Township Committee Monday unanimously approved a plan to install "Belgium block" curbing along Evergreen Circle, with 100 percent of the $13,338 installation cost shouldered by the residents. Under normal circumstances, the Township identifies areas for curb installation and subsequently assesses 50 percent of the cost to residents, but in this case, all but one resident along the stretch of Evergreen requested that curbing be installed. The cost will be distributed equally among participating residents.

EINSTEIN CORRESPONDENCE UNSEALED IN JERUSALEM: This postcard sent by Albert Einstein to his second wife Elsa is among a collection of more than 3,500 pages of letters, papers, postcards, and other correspondence that was opened and made public by the Albert Einstein Archives at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem this month. The collection had been sealed at the request of Princeton resident Margot Einstein, who died in 1986.

Private Letters Shed Light On Einstein's Personal Life

When Princeton's most famous resident, Albert Einstein, was away from his home on Mercer Street, he wrote almost daily letters to his second wife Elsa and to her daughter Margot. He wrote about listening to boring lectures, and about delivering them. He wrote about playing music with friends, and about his efforts to give up smoking.

It's hard to imagine the world's most famous physicist without his signature pipe.

Einstein's letters home are among a batch that have just come into the public domain, unsealed on July 10 in Jerusalem after being kept closed for the last 20 years at the behest of his stepdaughter, Margot Einstein, who willed them to the Hebrew University with the stipulation that they remain sealed for twenty years after her death, which occured in July 1986.

Earlier, upon his death in 1955 at the age of 76, Einstein's personal papers and literary estate had been bequeathed to the Hebrew University that he had helped found.

According to a news release from the university, the newly unsealed letters are part of a large collection of correspondence that was opened and made public by the Albert Einstein Archives there and should shed further light on Einstein's private life, filling in details to create a "higher resolution" image of the scientist.

Most of the letters were written to his second wife Elsa, a cousin, to whom he became romantically attached in 1912 when he was still married to his first wife, Mileva, a fellow scientist with whom he had two sons, Hans Albert and Eduard.

Many letters are from Mileva and their two sons. While they reveal intimate details of Einstein's life, they bear little on his scientific achievements.

The almost 3,500 pages of correspondence covers the years between 1912 and 1955. The release suggests that the most striking aspect of the more than 1,300 newly released letters is the way in which his extramarital affairs are openly discussed with his wife Elsa and his stepdaughter Margot, with whom he is quite candid about his wife's reluctant acceptance of the situation.

Among other liaisons, the letters document his falling in love, in 1923, with the young niece of a friend. The young woman had become Einstein's secretary, and he did his utmost to integrate her into his family life.

Between the mid-1920s and his emigration to the United States in 1933 to take up a leading position with the newly founded Institute for Advanced Study, there were other women in Einstein's personal life: a Margarete, an Estella, not one but two named Toni, and an Ethel, all of whom shared Einstein's company and the pleasures of sailing, reading books, and attending concerts.

References are made to women throughout his letters, often with the premise that they were chasing him and showering him with "unwanted" affection. In one letter to his stepdaughter, Margot, in 1931, Einstein confides, "It is true that Mrs. M. followed me [to England] and her chasing after me is getting out of control."

The letters clarify the fate of Einstein's 1921 Nobel Prize money. A sum of about $28,000 then, it would be worth ten times as much in today's value. Despite reports that Einstein transferred the money directly to Switzerland following a divorce agreement in which it was assigned to his first wife, Mileva, these letters reveal that he invested the major part of it in the United States where much of it was lost during the Depression through bond investments on Wall Street.

Letters flesh out his relationship with his sons and with his stepdaughter, Margot. Particular attention is given to his relationship with his son, Eduard, whose schizophrenia he had difficulty in accepting.

Writing to his wife Elsa in 1924, he said, "I love her [Margot] as much as if she were my own daughter, perhaps even more so, since who knows what kind of brat she would have become [had I fathered her]."

The letters also reveal private feelings regarding his famous theory of relativity. Writing to Elsa in 1921, he said, "Soon I'll be fed up with the relativity. Even such a thing fades away when one is too involved with it."

The new material is available for study at the Albert Einstein Archives at Hebrew University, where the letters have been read and indexed by archivist Barbara Wolff, who observed that they add color to the picture we already had of Einstein.

Some of the new material will be included in the 10th volume of the Einstein Archive, published by Princeton University Press and edited by the Einstein Papers Project at the California Institute of Technology.

According to the press release, translations of letters, images and background information are available on request from Rebecca Zeffert, Dept. of Media Relations, the Hebrew University. For more information, visit http://media.huji.ac.il.

THE DRIVEWAY AT THE KENNANS: Living behind the Kennans was like living in a park. May I have your attention, please I would like to make an announcement or two before returning to our regularly scheduled program.

First, due to some indescribably complicated circumstances, we will continue to sell sportcoats and suits at drastically reduced prices. (There are some sportswear items still reduced, as well.) This should continue into the first week of August, I think.

Second, we are putting in an exciting new, beautiful and unique women's department this fall. (Watch this space for details.)

Third I forget. Well, for one thing, we're not open Thursday nights any more. Waste of time. Let's see. We have a new guy joining us September 9. Ali Khatami, his name is. Used to work at Bijan. Plus, the new Zegna ties are in. Fantastic! I'm going to Italy in September. Can't think of anything else just now.

See you soon.

looked like a recording studio. Lots of high-tech equipment. Stalin's granddaughter had finished her lesson and was trying to lure a mutt named Snoopy out from under the sofa. Olga was about six, with a Buster Brown haircut and a round face. A Warren Zevon album was on the stereo. Normally the most gregarious and irrepressible of dogs, Snoopy was cowed by the little girl's energy. As soon as I sat down, she threw me a big Mickey Mouse ball and then a small yellow ball, both of which she kept in play while running around the room. The big wind that had blown away our picnic had nothing on Olga. My knowledge of her grandfather was pretty superficial, but it seemed right somehow that his grandchild was not a shy, unforthcoming little thing. When her mother, Svetlana, arrived, Olga and I were having a Nabokovian conversation. She'd been told I was a writer and that I had a little boy named Ben but she kept insisting his name must be Pen. She thought it made sense that a writer would name his child Pen, which would be, as she kept reminding me, short for Pencil.

Later, when we moved into a Hodge Road carriage house behind George Kennan, I thought about that windy April Fool's afternoon because our new landlord was the man who had been chosen to guide Svetlana Alliluyeva through her transition to the United States after she defected in 1967. In fact it was George Kennan who had convinced her to come to America in the first place.

Sycamore Heaven

The variously, intricately, colorfully dappled trunks of the sycamore trees gracing our portion of Patton Avenue were worthy of a sometime art reviewer's hosannas, including maybe some playful comparisons to Braque and, when the light was right, Matisse, but if Cézanne had been strolling down Patton at the right time of year he'd have propped up his easel and set right to work painting these American visions of the plane trees of Provence. If you were a three-year-old romping down Patton Avenue, you might be content just to pick up the camouflage-colored peelings of bark these great trees beautifully littered the sidewalk with, and if you were a father with a thankful fondness for Dr. Seuss, you might tell your son stories in which the sycamores became giraffeamore tree creatures shedding their fantastic skin. As an amateur art reviewer, your only criticism would concern the crazy things the roots did to the sidewalks, which could be real hazards for little boys and girls who ran before they looked.

If you were to take Cézanne to see the Hodge Road sycamores, he would put away his easel, lie down on his back somewhere out of the line of traffic, and feast his eyes. It may be an illusion that these trees appear so much more exalted and regal than their Patton Avenue cousins: certainly, there are more of them, the leafy canopies are loftier and more uniform, and they must be at least 30 years older. It also helps that the street itself was laid out on the grand scale. As fond as I am of Edgehill and Hibben and Lover's Lane, I don't think any street in Princeton can match Hodge, especially when it makes that stately curve not far from the Italianate house George and Annelise Kennan had been living in for 30 years when we moved into the apartment above their garage.

The Sage of Hodge Road

In Memoirs 1950-1963, George Kennan describes his home as "a comfortable, reliable and pleasant shelter ... devoid of ghosts and sinister corners" but also "slightly detached ... as though it did not expect us to stay forever." In conversation, he once mentioned having been impressed by the house when he was a student at Princeton; he had even imagined, he said, what it would be like to live there.

The term "garage apartment," or even the classier "carriage house," doesn't do justice to the airy but cozy home we lived in for six years. The dark red and dark green color scheme was in the Norwegian style, the Kennans explained, Norway being Annelise's homeland and their regular summer destination. George had built a playhouse for his children and painted it in the same colors, which meant that our son had a miniature version of the house he lived in at his disposal, so that he and the next door neighbor's son could more than once almost manage to set it on fire.

Looking at George Vogel's photos of the driveway brings back images of the tall, rangy figure of our landlord riding down it on his bicycle, not to mention a clear winter image of rosy-cheeked Annelise striding toward the street on a pair of skis, she who still favored that form of transportation well into her seventies, at least when the snow was deep enough. I never saw her husband on skis, but I did once help him shovel the driveway, at which time he was lamenting Reagan's Star Wars initiative and bemoaning the influence of Edward Teller. The Kennan I remember most fondly, however, is not the authority on the Soviet Union or diplomatic history. Admittedly, there's a kind of proprietary bias in perferring the intimate back door glimpses of a man in his bathrobe tossing stones to scare off squirrels raiding the bird feeder. But my favorite image is of the steadfast writer woodsman either taking fresh pieces from his extensive, neatly housed woodpile or else chopping the logs that provided the fuel for the wood-burning stove in the tower study where he worked. I never got to see that room, but just now when I asked my son for some memories of the Kennans, he spoke of the time Mr. Kennan showed him "a very special room at the top." The Nuclear Delusion, The Fateful Alliance, the beginning of Sketches for a Life, and numerous oped pieces for the New York Times were written up in the tower room when we lived behind the Kennans.

I was in Dublin in March 2005 when the news of George Kennan's death came. The papers in Ireland and England treated him like the monumental figure he was, running not mere obituaries but long, in-depth essays about his life and work. But there were no back door glimpses, nothing to suggest the warmth of the man we knew as a more-than-neighbor. If I could have written something for the paper on that occasion it would have been an afterword to the piece I wrote in February 2004, when he celebrated his 100th birthday. There were two qualities I would have mentioned, both almost too elusive to describe. One was the expression that sometimes passed over his face, the look of a sage who had reluctantly accepted what he knew to be an insoluble human dilemma, his eyes gazing beyond Arnold's "dark plain where ignorant armies clash by night" to a still darker truth. Something like the same mild, tenuous quality was in his voice, which I rarely heard him raise. I'm sure he raised it a good deal in his time, but in those Hodge Road years he often seemed to be speaking against the wind.

Although the street was named for Charles D. Hodge, president of the Princeton Theological Seminary, and, according to some sources, the leading Presbyterian theologian of the 19th century, for our family it is and was and always will be George Kennan's street.

PU Graduate Student Launches Campaign To Free Father From 'Political Witch Hunt'

As a worried daughter whose father has been jailed in a Taiwanese prison for more than 50 days, Rosalyne Shieh is clearly shaken, but remains calm. It's all for the sake of family, she said.

"My mom is a wreck," said Ms. Shieh, who is entering her final semester as a graduate student at the Princeton University School of Architecture. After what at first seemed to be a routine questioning, Ms. Shieh's father, Dr. Ching Shieh, has since had his financial records seized, and warrants to search his secretary's home and his driver's residence have been issued.

"They haven't charged him with anything and they've openly admitted that nothing has been found yet," said a baffled Ms. Shieh, who admitted to not fully comprehending the political motivations behind her father's arrest.

Dr. Shieh was taken into custody May 24 and has been held, without bail, ever since. Ms. Shieh has no direct contact with him; rather, she has to rely on weekly briefings from a team of lawyers working on his behalf.

The charges are ambiguous at best, Ms. Shieh said. After becoming a deputy minister of the National Science Council in Taiwan five years ago, Dr. Shieh adopted a project whose goal is to reduce vibrations from a high-speed railway abutting the Southern Taiwan Science Park, which had been interfering with semi-conductor companies that cannot sustain the high level of vibrations.

After partnering with a nine-member committee (which included Dr. Shieh as a non-voting member) to put the project out to bid, two companies were chosen for their designs: the first from Yung Chun Co. with a $56 million price tag (1.8 billion New Taiwan dollars); the second from Hung Hua Engineering Co., for a cost of $250 million (8.05 billion New Taiwan dollars).

The committee chose the higher-priced Hung Hua design to build a railway prototype, but the government, largely swayed by negative media influence, Ms. Shieh said, claimed that the high cost was unjustified and accused her father and the other eight committee members of favoritism.

"Of course, he's my father and I'm inclined to trust him, but he worked as a project engineer in the U.S. for 25 years and he has experience working on very specialized projects, and this is a very specialized problem," Ms. Shieh said, adding that the government stepped in after the losing design firm submitted a formal complaint.

"They're trying to imply that he was friends with the owner of the engineering company who won the bid, but he didn't know this person until the project started," Ms. Shieh said. What was suspicious, Ms. Shieh said, was that the firm had patented the design, effectively limiting the building process to one company — the bid winner.

Since Mr. Shieh gave up his U.S. citizenship for the deputy minister post, his family is left without many options. Additionally, Taiwan has no formal embassy here because the U.S. does not recognize Taiwanese independence from China.

Ms. Shieh believes the arrest is politically motivated. Two parties exist in Taiwan, the Democratic Progressive Party (DPP) and the Kuonmintang (KMT), and the two are at increasing odds, she said, alleging that the lead prosecutor in the case against her father openly admitted that there was little on which to build a case.

"My father was appointed by the executive branch of the government, so he was appointed by the DPP," she said, but added that that all other branches of government are KMT. The DPP had been traditionally known as the opposition party, in favor of separatism from China, and generally reviled by the KMT. As such, Ms. Shieh believes there are major political forces working against her father.

"It's basically a political witch hunt," she said. "The DPP is looking for scapegoats and my father is just one of many."

The Shiehs have established a Web site, www.supporting-ching.com, and are simply waiting for the next update on Dr. Shieh's status.

"He's just been cut off," Ms. Shieh said. "Life goes on out here, but he's the one who suffers the most."

TOWN TALK©

A forum for Princeton residents to express opinions about local and national issues.

Question of the Week:

What are some of your favorite places to shop in Princeton and are there any stores that you would like to see move into town?

"I really liked the Gap and wish it would come back, and I would like a cheap grocery store." — Kirk Doran, Princeton University graduate student

"We really like J. Crew, Honey West, Rouge and Ralph Lauren. We'd like to see some 'teen age' stores like American Eagle." — Courtney Alexander (right), and Clodagh Coghlan, Lawrenceville and Pennington

"My favorite place is Micawber Books. As for new stores, that is a tough one — I am satisfied with what we have now." — Fred Hargadon, Harrison Street

"I really like Zoe. I can't afford it all the time because I am a graduate student, but I like to go in there and look at all the beautiful clothing. I like Rouge — they have lots of up-and-coming designers and Banana Republic. My favorite store in the whole world is Anthropologie. I think that it is an amazing little store. There is one on Rte. 1, but I would love to see one come to Princeton." — Sarah Szczepanski, Princeton University graduate student

"We enjoy shopping at Rouge, Zoe and Coach. We'd like to see another clothing store like J. Crew or Banana Republic — not too expensive — something a little more for teens." — Lauren Panasewicz (left), and Melissa Lupos, Montgomery

For a Lazy Day on the Water Stick to the D and R Canal

Since commercial activity ceased on the Delaware & Raritan Canal in 1932, almost a century after it first opened, the canal has served Princeton as a source of recreation. The towpath presents a natural resource for wildlife, as well as for walkers, birdwatchers, cyclists, naturalists, and Sunday strollers. In the heat of summer, the waterway itself presents an attractive prospect for canoeists and kayakers.

A couple of seasons ago my son and I tried kayaking the Stony Brook. We put in by the bridge on Rosedale Road (Route 604) and paddled down to the bridge at the junction of Mercer and Quaker Roads. Half a mile from our takeout we met with what our guidebook had described as a small surprise. My son Michael had pushed ahead and taken the bend that I was languidly approaching when I heard his warning shout, "Watch out!"

With my parental senses peaked, I was suddenly aware of the sound of rushing water, no doubt some gushing fall that had materialized since the guidebook author had passed this way. In my mind, the stream just round the bend had become a raging torrent rushing over a cataract hitherto unknown, and taking my only child with it. I paddled furiously to the bank, took off on foot through a field of stinging nettles only to find Michael sitting happily midstream, unharmed.

If you are planning a lazy day on the water, let this be a warning to you. Stick to the Delaware & Raritan Canal or try the Millstone River.

Or try a combination of both. From Kingston to Blackwell's Mills, a wonderful round-trip outing can be had on the Millstone River, downstream through Rocky Hill and Griggstown and then portage from the river to the D & R canal for an upstream return. You'll sight herons, mallards, and of course Canada geese, and spot turtle families sunning themselves. You may even, as I did, catch sight of an enormous tom turkey ambling through the woods that flank the river.

Put in at Kingston just north of the lock keeper's house and paddle between the two bridges. The small building to the right of the house used to be the tollhouse for the canal and a commercial Morse telegraph station, once the principal means of communication along the length of the canal. The lock itself was originally used for raising or lowering boats between different levels of the canal, and now serves as a flood control gate. The old stone bridge that was built in 1798 replaced a wooden one that General George Washington crossed during the Revolutionary War. It was destroyed by the Continental Army after the Battle of Princeton in order to delay the pursuing British. The modern bridge next to it carries Route 27.

Immediately under the bridge, the river turns to the right and spreads, flowing along between high banks running parallel to the towpath and canal on the right all the way to Rocky Hill. There the river goes under another bridge (Route 518) before meeting a small chute through what's left of an old dam that provides a bit of white water excitement (if you like that sort of thing).

From Kingston to Rocky Hill is about two miles on the river. Three miles downriver at Griggstown, the Delaware and Raritan State Park is a pleasant place to stop for a picnic. It has tables, benches, a meadow, and the Mule Tenders' Barracks Museum.

At Blackwells Mills, a further 3.5 miles on, you can choose to get out before another bridge or go under the bridge and plunge over the 18-inch weir for another bit of excitement. Then portage your canoe across the canal for the return trip to Princeton. With occasional downed trees, be prepared to portage every now and then. For the novice canoeist, portage means to pick up your canoe and wade.

Incidentally, the Millstone is one of the few rivers in the country that flows north, an accident of ancient geology so I have been told. It was called the Mattawong ("hard to travel") by the native peoples. While the name generally no longer applies, there are some small challenges, enough to keep a family outing interesting: sandbanks that require you to do a bit of poling or wading and fallen trees that you have to duck under.

Renting a Canoe

We paddled our own inflatable kayak but canoes and kayaks can be rented for the day or the hour at Griggstown Canoe and Kayak Rental, 1076 Canal Road, Griggstown, (908) 359-5970, and at Princeton Canoe and Kayak Rental, 483 Alexander Road, Princeton, (609) 452-2403. If you want to paddle into Lake Carnegie, rent at Alexander Road.

Steve Androsko, proprietor of both sites, allows canoes to be taken onto the river if the water is not too low, often the case in summer, or too high, because of heavy rain. State law requires that children 12 and under wear the life-vests provided. Pets are allowed.

In Griggstown, the weekend and holiday hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and weekdays are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. In Princeton, the weekend and holiday hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and weekdays are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Last boat hire at both sites is one hour before closing. For a canoe (maximum 4 persons, 2 seats) the charge is $13 for the first hour, $6 thereafter or $35 for the day; single person kayaks are $10 or $12 for the first hour (depending on style of kayak), $5 thereafter and $25 or $30 for the day; a two-person kayak is $15 for the first hour, $6 thereafter and $40 for the day. Release forms must be signed for those 18 and under. For more information, visit www.canoenj.com, from which site release forms can be downloaded.

Don't forget to take along some snacks, water, insect repellent, and sunscreen. For a brief afternoon one can still connect, if only in the imagination, with the spirits of the Lenni Lenape who once inhabited these woods and the early settlers for whom the woods provided so much. Now all we seek is peace and quiet, a stress-free day on the water.

If you want to go even further afield, I recommend Exploring the Little Rivers of New Jersey by James and Margaret Cawley (Rutgers University Press, 1993) and if you really get hooked, try Canoeing the Jersey Pine Barrens by Robert Parnes (The Globe Pequot Press) and Garden State Canoeing: A Paddler's Guide to New Jersey by Edward Gertler (The Seneca Press, 1992).

top two floors. Conversely, several members of the Regional Planning Board of Princeton and the officials representing Princeton HealthCare System (PHCS), UMCP's parent entity, say the towns will not get the desired level of affordable housing and open space if the building height is reduced and spread out over the 12-acre site.

Planning for the hospital's departure is far more extensive in the Borough, where most of the proposed residences would be located. The Township portion of the site is largely composed of the hospital garage, the Medical Arts Building at the corner of Witherspoon and Henry Avenue, some residences in Harris Road to the east, the hospital's surgi-center, and one medical office building. The medical office building and surgi-center are likely to be removed, but the Medical Arts Building could be used as office buildings, and it is almost certain that the garage will remain to provide parking for future development.

When Planning Director Lee Solow presented three draft zoning ordinances to Borough Council July 11 — one outlining future development standards, creating a new MRRO (Mixed Residential Retail Office) zoning district; one mandating building design standards within the MRRO; and one that would create a new zone, R4A, on the existing surface parking lot on Franklin Avenue — Council members had to grapple with the idea of reusing existing buildings.

"The hospital got relief no other developer would be entitled to," said Councilman David Goldfarb, who is a proponent of shaving two stories off the hospital towers if they are converted to residential buildings. "We need to require ways to mitigate the visual impact," he said.

But Councilman Roger Martindell voiced the general sentiment of the Planning Board, saying that the buildings should remain at height. "If we tear down two stories, we are removing [space] from the public domain and from the tax base," he said.

Pam Hersh, vice president for Government and Community Affairs at Princeton HealthCare System, said that the proposed zoning was the "poster child" for smart growth and sustainability, as the buildings would be reused, and be compliant with LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) standards.

Knocking the buildings down, she said, would be an "obscene waste of materials and resources."

Council President Peggy Karcher seemed to agree when she acknowledged that height "allows us open space that we might not have on the ground level.

"I am not in favor of taking the height down at all."

This past Monday, hospital administrators, this time accompanied by J. Robert Hillier, the architect retained by PHCS as a design consultant presenting possible scenarios for future development, addressed members of Township Committee.

Mr. Hillier, a principal of the West Windsor-based Hillier Architecture and a part owner of Town Topics, focused on the garage as a pivotal part of hospital site redevelopment. As it stands, the garage holds 697 spaces, but, if there is a retail presence on Witherspoon Street near Henry Avenue, the parking requirement, along with spaces mandated for residences, offices, and commercial space to the south, could balloon to 712. That number would go down, Mr. Hillier said, if the full 280 one-bedroom residences were built in the Borough portion of the site, rather than more two-bedroom units. Fewer spaces are mandated for one-bedroom apartments.

However, even if the development calls for full garage capacity, Mr. Hillier said that residential parking would probably be at a low at the times of day when commercial activity would be at its peak: "There is a staggering of the times which works to our advantage and frankly gets better use out of the parking garage," he said.

Neither of the governing bodies are expected to make any decision on prospective zoning until the fall. Both the Borough and Township are likely to entertain zoning ordinance introductions in either September or October.

Corner House

James Pascale, Township administrator. PADA will retain oversight for its own programming, and the Alliance's bylaws will have to be changed to recognize Corner House's independence.

The new board would consist of three residents from each municipality, one liaison from each governing body, and an ex-officio member representing the Corner House Foundation.

Three weeks ago when Township Committee first introduced the measure that would create an independent Corner House board, there was little opposition. However, at Monday's public hearing, the climate was somewhat different.

Maureen Marchetta, PADA board vice chair, said that while she embraced the concept of separating Corner House from the rest of PADA operations, a midsummer vote, when several PADA board members are away, was not an appropriate time for such considerations:

"I'm really disappointed that this vote was scheduled for the month of July," she said, asking Township Committee to delay its vote. The PADA board, which last met in June, will not convene again until September, she said, pointing out that those board members "could have added value to this process."

Ms. Marchetta asked Committee to delay its vote until September when PADA board members are back in town.

But Mr. Pascale contended that the summer is the "perfect time" for a vote because it would ensure that the new entity's structure is in place when the school year begins. He also tried to answer concerns that the new board's creation was a "slap in the face" to PADA.

"That is completely not true," he said, but added that the system in place now "just doesn't work."

Committeeman Lance Liverman, who serves as the municipal liaison to PADA, supported the creation of the Corner House board, but echoed Mr. Pascale, saying that Corner House has grown to the point where it is "almost impossible" for PADA to oversee operations.

The PADA board members have "other functions that they can concentrate on. It's not that the PADA board has done anything wrong, they're doing a great job, and I want to see them do more," Mr. Liverman said.

But that increased activity should not include Corner House, he went on to say: "This is a way to fine tune Corner House as it moves forward."

Nominees for the Township representation on the new Corner House board are: Raphael Costa for a one-year term; John Curtis for a two-year term; Wendy Jolley for a three-year term; and Mr. Liverman serving as the municipal liaison.

In other news, as expected, Bayard Lane resident Chad Goerner was unanimously appointed to fill a vacancy on Township Committee created when Bill Hearon resigned last month citing time restraints involving CARD Management, the business he runs with his wife, Joan Bartl. Mr. Goerner, who won the Democratic primary in June, will carry out Mr. Hearon's term, set to expire December 31.

Mr. Goerner is running unopposed in the November elections and so is all but guaranteed a win for a proper three-year term beginning January 1, 2007.

Finally, Township Committee rejected a request by the Princeton Recreation Department to hire two additional maintenance staff workers, primarily to maintain playing fields. The Committee was split, with Mr. Liverman and Mayor Phyllis Marchand voting in favor, and Deputy Mayor Bernie Miller and Committeeman Chad Goerner voting against, citing budgetary constraints. The tie vote ensured a defeat, as Committeewoman Vicky Bergman was absent. Committee did move to hire one new staff worker to fill an existing vacancy.

NET GAIN: Mike Campbell, a water safety instructor at the Princeton Family YMCA, will attempt a new record for the most basketball foul shots successfully completed, in a fund-raiser at the YMCA this Friday, July 21. Mr. Campbell, of West Windsor, is the current record holder, having completed 1,076 successful shots out of 1,266 attempts last year at Rutgers University. The public is invited to the event, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the YMCA's Gym A on Paul Robeson Place. For more information, call (609) 497-9622, ext. 203.

Guinness Book of Records Attempt at YMCA Friday

The holder of a world record for the most basketball foul shots successfully completed in an hour will attempt a new record at the Princeton Family YMCA this Friday, July 21 at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited.

Mike Campbell, a part-time water safety instructor at the YMCA since 1991, set the record in April 2005 at the Rutgers University Athletic Center in Piscataway — 1,076 successful shots out of 1,266 attempted. The previous record had been 867 successful shots. The new record was officially recognized by the Guinness Book of Records last August with a certificate commemorating the achievement.

Mr. Campbell's new goal is more than 1,100 successful shots. "I've had the record for a year now," he said, "but I know that if I want to keep it I'll have to raise the bar."

A West Windsor resident, Mr. Campbell teaches lifeguard training during the fall, winter, and spring at the YMCA. His attempt at the new Guinness record will take place in the YMCA Gym A on Paul Robeson Place. It will help raise funds for the new YMCA School of Basketball Program, set to start in September for children 4 to 16 years of age. The funds will be used to buy equipment and uniforms for the YMCA's in-house leagues and travel teams. Voluntary funding for the program is being sought from YMCA sponsors, members, and event participants.

For more information, call Geoff McBride, YMCA Youth and Adult Sports Director, at (609) 497-9622, ext. 203.

Saladworks Owed Two Month's Rent, Landlord Says; Wants Vacancy Filled

When Saladworks disappeared from its 84 Nassau Street location last week, the sign on the door indicated that the store was closed due to "equipment failure."

According to the landlord of the building that housed Saladworks, however, the real problem lay with the tenant's failure to pay the rent.

John Roberto, co-owner of Hinkson's and a principal of Town Management inc., the company that owns 80-84 Nassau Street in Princeton Borough, filed suit last week in Mercer County Court against Rich Hopkins, the franchise owner of Saladworks. Mr. Hopkins, who also owns Saladworks restaurants in Chatham Township and Piscataway Township, declined to comment on the store's closure.

"Saladworks has decided to close and leave, and they still owe June and July rent," said Mr. Roberto, who suggested the amount owed was between $15,000 and $20,000. Mr. Hopkins signed a 10-year lease with Town Management in 2005 after Burger King, a 20-year tenant of 84 Nassau, had decided not to renew its lease.

"I just want my rent, I want what's due to us. They think it's a joke and that they can pull out any time they want, and they just can't do that," he said. "People forget that landlords run a business. The tax department doesn't wait for their payment."

Mr. Roberto said he had tried to work with Mr. Hopkins through late rent payments resulting from a struggling business.

Right now, an August 4 County court hearing is scheduled. "If he decides he wants to pay at that point, by the lease, I have to accept his money and leave him in there; if he doesn't, hopefully he'll turn the keys over to me," Mr. Roberto said.

The Hinkson's proprietor said that he has prospective tenants "lined up" for the vacancy.

Currently, the former Hinkson's spot is under lease to Qdoba Mexican Grill, a Tex-Mex franchise. The opening of that restaurant, Mr. Roberto said, has been delayed in part to permit acquisition from the Borough. To that end, Mr. Roberto added, as long as a tenant is paying rent, his hands are tied.

"I know it's an eyesore to have both stores look like that, so as soon as August 4 comes, whether Saladworks is in or out, I'm going to try to get somebody in there who's going to stay," Mr. Roberto said.

Wilberforce School Moving To Township; Witherspoon Institute Plan Sparks Debate

A budding school in Princeton Borough is about to make the move to a more accommodating space in Princeton Township.

The Wilberforce School, which serves kindergarten through third grade and specializes in Christian education, has been operating in the basement of the Lutheran Church on Nassau Street near Cedar Lane in the Borough since opening last fall. The school, however, has quickly outgrown its current spot, and on Thursday, it received approval from the Regional Planning Board of Princeton to relocate to classrooms at the Princeton Church of Christ, near the corner of River Road and Princeton-Kingston Road in the Township.

No exterior changes are planned for the move, but school administrators are looking toward a phased expansion that will peak at the sixth grade, after which a cap will be placed on admissions. The Planning Board approved the Wilberforce application with a conditional 75-student cap.

The cap should be sufficient for the school's needs, but Howe Whitman, Wilberforce's headmaster, expressed a sense of urgency in regard to an expansion of the school's enrollment and programming. "Once we opened our doors, we were full," he said. The current enrollment at Wilberforce is 28 students with three faculty members and one administrator. Once the school reaches its enrollment cap, Mr. Whitman said faculty numbers will also peak at eight or nine.

As was the case with the Princeton French School's 2004 request for Planning Board approval to increase enrollment, traffic was a central concern among Board members. Mr. Whitman said a coordinator has been installed to handle carpooling issues, and estimated that of the 28 students attending the school this year, about 20 cars were involved in transporting them.

According to Mr. Whitman, the parking lot at the Princeton Church of Christ will accommodate the school's traffic, as well as parking for occasional evening meetings. Currently, all grades begin at 8:30 a.m., with grades 1 and 2 letting out at 12:30 p.m. and all other grades letting out at 3 p.m.

In other business, the Planning Board approved a proposal by the Witherspoon Institute, a non-profit public policy research foundation, to convert a three story, 5,000 square-foot, single family house at 16 Stockton Street into offices that would also serve as off-campus research facilities to non-Princeton University faculty. The Witherspoon Institute purchased the house in December 2005 and has been operating out of offices at 20 Nassau Street in preparation for the move.

Members of the Board, particularly Gail Ullman and Jacqueline Tillmann, underlined an ongoing concern of taking tax-paying properties off the tax rolls for the benefit of not-for-profit institutions. "Every time a substantial property goes off the tax rolls, my property tax goes up," said Ms. Ullman, a Borough resident, who also worried that while parking requirements could handle the Witherspoon Institute's current vehicular situation, the plan is "an example of an application that won't work 10 years out."

"At what point do we stop?" asked Ms. Tillman, who cast a vote in favor of the plan because the current Borough ordinance permits the intended use of the Witherspoon Institution. The Planning Board vote was unanimous, but Ms. Ullman warned that she did not "want to ever hear Borough Council complain" about the approval as long as the zoning allowances stood.

The Witherspoon Institute application indicates that there will be four permanent staff members, and accommodations for up to eight visiting scholars.

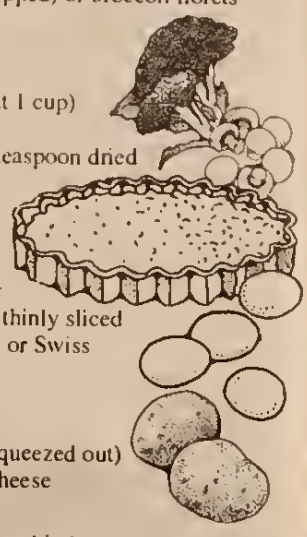
Vegetable Quiche

From The Healthy Kitchen – Recipes for a Better Body, Life, and Spirit by Andrew Weil, M.D and Rosie Daley (Knopf)

This fresh vegetable "quiche" is made with a light, crispy potato crust and a filling of vegetables and herbs and spices. It makes a wonderful morning brunch or lunch ar o simple dinner when served with o salad and a small, toasted baguette. If you should nat be eating egg yolks, you con make it using anly the egg whites.



Serves 8
½ cup punified water
¼ cup sun-dried tomatoes
½ lb asparagus (about 2 cups chopped) or broccoli florets
½ medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, sliced
2 thlsp extra-virgin olive oil
1 carrot, cut in small cuhes (about 1 cup)
5 mushrooms, sliced
1 thlsp chopped fresh basil, or 1 teaspoon dried
1 tblsp chopped fresh parsley
⅛ tsp chili flakes
⅛ tsp freshly grated nutmeg
½ tsp salt
1 tsp freshly ground hlack pepper
3 small red potatoes, washed and thinly sliced
½ cup grated cheese, Pepper Jack or Swiss
¼ cup milk
½ cup low-fat sour cream
6 eggs
1 medium tomato, sliced (seeds squeezed out)
3 tblsp freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Preheat oven to 375°F.

2. Boil the water, pour over the sun-dried tomatoes, and allow to soak for about 15 minutes until they become soft and plump. Strain off any remaining liquid, and coarsely chop.

3. Cut off about 1 inch of the coarse ends of the asparagus stalks and discard or save them for soup. Cut the remaining stalks into about 6 pieces or chop coarsely. If you are using broccoli, cut into florets.

4. Blanch the asparagus by boiling it in a medium pot of water for 2 minutes or less. Asparagus should be bright green and firm to the bite. Drain, rinse the asparagus in cold water, and drain again in a colander.

5. Sauté the onions and the garlic in the olive oil over low heat until the onions are transparent, approximately 10 minutes. Add the carrots, mushrooms, hasil, parsley, chili flakes, nutmeg, salt and pepper and continue to cook for 5 more minutes. Remove from the heat.

6. Lightly grease the bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie pan. Line the bottom with the potato slices, overlapping them slightly.

7. Whisk together the cheese, milk, sun-dried tomatoes, sour cream and the eggs in a large bowl. Mix in the sautéed vegetables and the blanched asparagus, coating everything with the cheese, milk and egg liquid, then pour into the potato-lined pie pan. Arrange the tomato slices on top and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese.

8. Bake for 1 hour, covering after 45 minutes if top browns. Completely baked quiche should be very firm.

9. Let cool 15 minutes before slicing and serving. Leftovers can be wrapped and kept in the refrigerator for up to 3 days.

Residential Dorm Renewal Program Moves Forward As PU Plan OK'd

An advisory wing of the Regional Planning Board of Princeton offered the green light to a Princeton University proposal that will raze five dorms composing the school's residential Butler College for a slightly larger series of new dorms, all to be located on the dormitory's footprint.

The Site Plan Review Advisory Board (SPRAB) was able to grant the approval without full Planning Board consent because the building proposal is considered a minor site plan, seeking no zoning variances.

The University aims to raze Lourie-Love Hall, 1922 Hall, 1940 Hall, 1941 Hall, and 1942 Hall to make way for the constuction of a new 112,000-square-foot dormitory to house an estimated 291 students. The new system, which will retain the name of Butler College, would consist of two buildings connected by an underground tunnel. The new dorms will occupy approximately 2,000 square feet more space than the current dorm system with a resulting reduction of about 1,000 square feet of impervious surface.

Slated to go up just east of the site of the former "Pagoda" tennis courts (where Whitman College is being built), the new dorms were hailed by the University as the latest move in improving the school's residential college housing system.

University Architect Jon Hlafter said modernized dorms, more in keeping with the modern architecture of that southern portion of campus, will feature a mostly brick and limestone exterior and range between three and five stories.

Each building will have a new courtyard area, with the easternmost courtyard containing an amphitheater. According to a design composite submitted to the Planning Board, the buildings will feature bedrooms, common rooms, seminar classrooms, a small library, a cafeteria, and laundry facilities.

Of concern, particularly to SPRAB member Kevin Wilkes, was the amphitheater. While described by Mr. Hlafter as an area of "quiet contemplation" for students, Mr. Wilkes envisioned a more socially active locale. Additionally, he worried about wheelchair access for disabled students. Mr. Hlafter said the University would install handrails and implement other safety measures for handicapped accessibility.

SPRAB member Anne Waldron Neumann urged the University to consider installing "green roofs" on the new dorms and made reference to the school's "infinitely deep pockets" while she urged the buildings to be LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) compliant. A green roof is typically completely or partially covered in soil and vegetation and is known to filter carbon dioxide and reduce heating and cooling expenses. Mr. Hlafter said while green roof installation could be considered a goal, he could not guarantee the University would include that tactic in its building plans.

The proposed construction, like the current Butler College, straddles the Borough/Township municipal line, with just over 12 percent lying in the Borough.

University plans also outline three new houses along the east side of Elm Drive to serve as residences for the masters of Butler, Wilson, and Whitman colleges, but no design has been submitted yet.

As the upgraded Butler College plan moves forward, the University is approaching completion of Whitman, the school's sixth residential college. Part of the aim in revitalizing the school's residential college system is to be better equipped for an anticipated incremental increase of 500 students by 2012. The new residential college plan calls for three four-year residential colleges and two three-year residential colleges.

The opening of Whitman College, which is set for fall 2007, will coincide with the transformation of Mathey College into a four-year residential facility. Butler College, according to University plans, is slated to be a four-year residential college by the fall of 2009 — once the current dorms have been replaced.

Additionally, nearby Bloomberg Hall, bordering Poe-Pardee Field, will be absorbed into Butler by 2009.

University officials originally presented the Butler College plan to the full Planning Board in a February concept hearing.

Downtown Redevelopment Completion Calls for Careful Risk-Reward Analysis

To the Editor:

Princeton Borough's governing body will soon decide whether to take the next step in the downtown redevelopment project. That decision affects Borough taxpayers.

The downtown redeveloper, NHKT, and its new partner, WURA, seek a long-term loan at a favorable interest rate to save themselves hundreds of thousands of dollars in financing costs. Their lender requires that NHKT transfer its interest in Witherspoon House, the multi-million dollar structure next to the municipal parking garage, to WURA. The transfer is subject to Borough approval. Should the Borough approve?

Maybe. The Borough wants to complete the downtown redevelopment and therefore is inclined to support the transfer. But what risks exist in Borough approval, and what should the Borough negotiate as a condition of approval?

The Borough's main concern is that Witherspoon House secures many obligations to the Borough. Once the building is transferred, that security is gone. Without that security the Borough faces significant risk in relying on NHKT to make good on its obligations to the town.

First, the Borough has been named as a defendant in lawsuits filed by contractors who built the municipal garage, plaza, and Witherspoon House, but were not paid by NHKT. If the Borough is not successful in the defense of those claims, it will spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to satisfy the contractors. Clearly, the Borough should not approve the transfer of Witherspoon House until the suits are settled.

Second, there are numerous "punch list" items yet to be finished in the project: for example, the pergola to be installed between the plaza and the stores on Spring Street. Will NHKT have the financial wherewithal to complete the items, or will the Borough have to do so?

Third, the Borough has incurred tens of thousands of dollars in legal bills, and additional tens of thousands of dollars in staff time, to defend lawsuits filed by the unpaid NHKT contractors and to negotiate the refinancing of the project — more than $100,000 and still climbing. To date, NHKT and WURA have refused to pay the Borough's legal and staff costs. Isn't it reasonable that they be required to do so, especially since the Borough approval they seek will save them hundreds of thousands of dollars in financing costs?

Fourth, the municipal parking garage leaks ground water. The cost of repair has been variously reported at $400,000 to $700,000. NHKT is obligated to cover that cost. The Borough has hired an independent consultant to review the proposed fix. The Borough has yet to receive a written report from its consultant opining whether NHKT's proposed fix is feasible and whether the warranties covering the fix are appropriate. In the absence of such report, the Borough runs the risk of having an incomplete garage with impaired structural integrity.

These and other issues confront the Borough in considering whether to permit NHKT to transfer Witherspoon House to WURA. The developers assert that the Borough need not feel insecure by the transfer because the developers posted substantial escrow funds to settle the lawsuits, complete the project's punch list, and repair the garage. But the Borough does not have unilateral control over those funds and must obtain the developers' consent for their release. What if the developers refuse to release the escrowed funds?

In sum, there is good reason for the Borough to assist in completing the downtown redevelopment by approving the proposed transfer of Witherspoon House. But there remain significant risks also. The risk-reward analysis should be carefully conducted in public.

Proposed Morgan Estates Development Meets All Criteria for Senior Housing

To the Editor:

In his letter to the editor (Town Topics, July 12), William B. Stephenson objects to the attempt by Morgan Estates, LLC to gain a zoning variance for senior housing on Bunn Drive. After questioning the legitimacy of the proposal, Mr. Stephenson asks us to believe that "this is not senior housing."

If something looks like a duck, walks like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it's a duck. Similarly, if a project qualifies by law as senior housing, conforms to zoning regulations for senior housing, and is approved as senior housing by overseeing agencies and committees, it's senior housing.

HOLD THE SALT

New research suggests that a high-salt diet ranks with smoking, diabetes, and sun exposure as a factor that increases the risk of developing cataracts. A study ol nearly 30,000 men and women whose diets included approximately 3,000 milligrams of sodium were more than twice as likely to be diagnosed with posterior subcapsular cataracts than those who limited their salt intake. This type ol cataract, also known as "fast cataract," can progress rapidly and tends to be much more advanced in one eye than the other. The formation ol an opaque, plaque-like cell growth, occurring dead center on the back surface of the lens, stands in the path of central light rays that pass to the macula lor reading vision.

A cataract is an eye defect in which part of the lens, which is normally clear and translucent, becomes cloudy. Research indicates a link between a high-salt diet and cataracts. August is Cataract Awareness Month.

Call MONTGOMERY EYE CARE at 609-279-0005 to schedule an eye exam that includes screening for cataracts and discussion ol treatment options. We are located at Montgomery Center at 1325 Rt. 206. Office hours are Mon 10-8; Tues, Wed, Thurs 10-7; Fri 10-6, and Sat 9-3.

P. S. Because of their rapid onset and marked impairment of reading vision, posterior subcapsular cataracts are often lar more debilitating than other forms ol cataract.

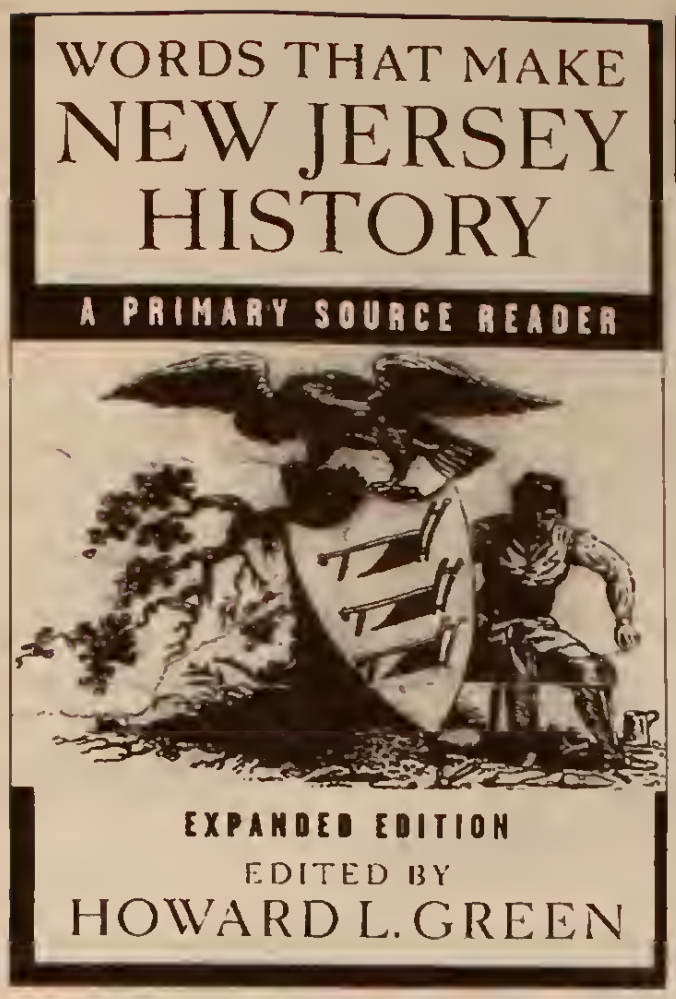
BOOKS



DOCUMENTS OUTLINING NEW JERSEY HISTORY FROM DUTCH TRADERS TO SPRINGSTEEN: Howard L. Green's newly revised and updated edition of Words That Make New Jersey History (Rivergate Books/Rutgers University Press $23.95) is composed of documents — letters, journals, pamphlets, petitions, artwork, and songs, including Bruce Springsteen's lament about the declining factory town he grew up in.

POETRY AND NEEDLEPOINT: Paula Bramsen Cullen's poetry is augmented by her needlework in her book The Sun's Palette: Poems and Tapestries. Some of her abstract needlepoint tapestries will be on display on July 29, at 3 p.m. in the Acer Courtyard at Grounds For Sculpture, where she will appear with Hanna Fox, the publisher and editor-in-chief of Red Hummingbird Press, the volume's publisher.

Garden State History Updated to McGreevey

A revised and expanded edition of Words That Make New Jersey History: A Primary Souce Reader (Rivergate Books/Rutgers University Press $23.95) edited by Howard L. Green has been updated to include the text of James McGrevey's "I am a Gay American" speech as well as entries about the Abbott v. Burke court ruling mandating that New Jersey equallze funding of urban and suburban school districts; sprawl and its effects on water supply; and the state's economic boom in the 1990s.

The book is composed of documents — letters, journals, pamphlets, petitions, artwork, and songs — that span the history of New Jersey from the arrival of Dutch traders in the 1600s to the present. Sources include not only those who were in power but immigrants, workers, slaves, foreign traders, and civil servants.

According to Mr. Green, who compiled the documents as a project of the N.J. Historical Commission, the volume is "well-suited to general readers who want to explore the primary sources of the state's past and to U.S. History students at the high school and college levels."

The materials touch on such subject areas as factories and farms, cities and suburbs, slavery and abolitionism, the temperance and suffrage campaigns, race and ethnic relations, the labor movement, and environmental issues.

Local Poets, Publisher At Grounds For Sculpture

Red Hummingbird Press and Grounds For Sculpture are presenting a special "Poetry in the Park" event featuring Princeton residents Paula Bramsen Cullen and Hanna Fox on Saturday, July 29, at 3 p.m. in the Acer Courtyard at Grounds For Sculpture, 18 Fairgrounds Road in Hamilton. Ms. Cullen is the author of The Sun's Palette: Poems and Tapestries and Ms. Fox is the publisher and editor-in-chief of Red Hummingbird Press, the volume's publisher.

In this her second poetry collection, Ms. Cullen's poetry is augmented by her needlework, and several of her abstract needlepoint tapestries will be on display. After the reading, author/artist and publisher/editor will discuss the publishing process as they transformed the poems and tapestries into the book. Copies of the book, personally autographed, will be for sale.

Ms. Cullen's first collection, Journey of Storms, was praised by author Judith Viorst for "offer[ing] a true and eloquent glimpse into the psychoanalytic experience." Theodore Isaac Rubin, M.D. — whose books include David and Lisa — described the poems as "gentle, sensitive and beautiful." Ms. Cullen's work has appeared in various literary journals, including Cimarron Review, Hyacinths and Biscuits, Journal of New Jersey Poets, Kansas Quarterly, and Poem.

"When I witness a moment that moves or intrigues me, I merge with it and explore it," said Ms. Cullen of her poetry.

The Sun's Palette ($15.00) is avaliable through www.redhummingbirdpress.com or by calling (609) 924-0885, and by special order at bookstores everywhere.

Red Hummingbird Press is a small, independent publishing house dedicated to the publication of books dealing with social issues. The Press is committed to authors who have a level of excellence in writing about the human condition and whose works reflect diverse backgrounds, experiences, and views.

"I saw so many wonderful manuscripts during my years of teaching writing," said publisher/editor Hanna Fox. "I've always felt that there are a number of unrecognized manuscripts that should be in the literary marketplace, and now I'm able to do something about it."

Other Red Hummingbird publications include Virginia Stuart's novel, Candle in a Dark Time and Carl A. Fields's memoir Black in Two Worlds: A Personal Perspective on Higher Educotion about his experiences of being the first black American administrator at Princeton University and the University of Zambia during the 1960s and 1970s.

Caliper's CEO, Exec VP Publish Book on Success

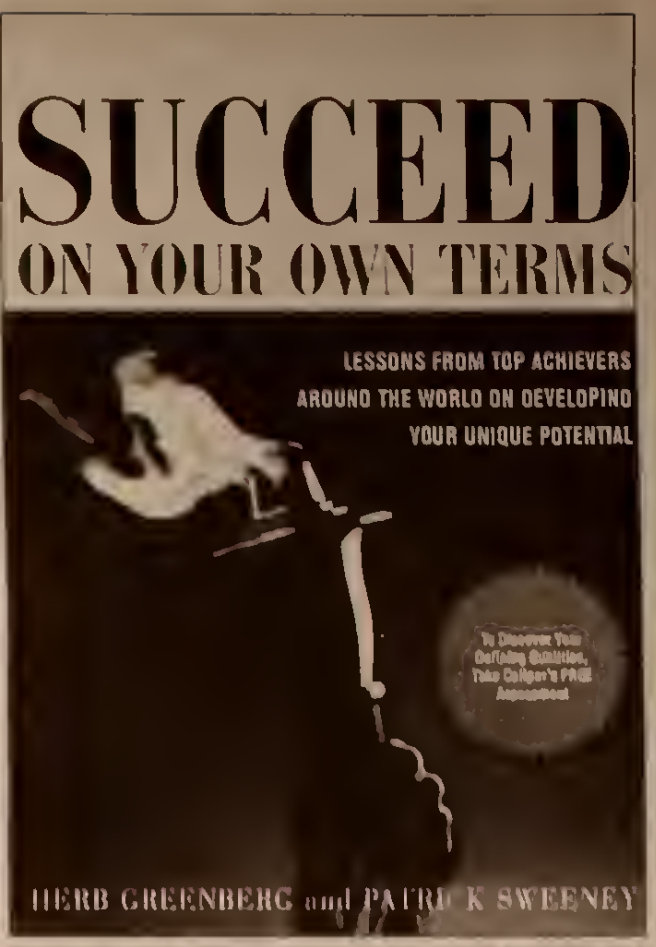
Herb Greenberg and Patrick Sweeney, the founder/president/CEO and executive vice-president of the Princeton-based international consulting firm, Caliper, have put together a collection of interviews with "top achievers around the world" called Succeed On Your Own Terms (McGraw Hill $21.95).

Princeton area subjects among those interviewed are Congressman Rush Holt (D - 12), architect Michael Graves, and Governor Jon Corzine. Other interviewees range from former Dallas Cowboy Roger Staubach to Senator Barbara Boxer.

In his comments, Mr. Graves talked about the task of creating the headquarters and training center for the Philadelphia Eagles. He also discussed the designing of his famous Alessi tea kettle, which he thinks "captured the public's imagination because it was somewhat whimsical. The retail store Target ... says I 'put the fun in functional.'"

Mr. Holt talked about his decision to vote "No" on authorizing the invasion of Iraq: "The line between compromising and standing up for your beliefs is drawn a little more starkly in politics than anywhere else," he said. "But I think the principle of listening to your heart and standing up for what you believe in ... is the same for all of us in our daily struggles. In the end, all we can do is be true to ourselves."

The title for Gov. and former Senator Corzine's interview, "Assert Yourself," is apt in the light of the recent budget deadlock. "I just feel that people in positions of authority should set important agendas," he observed. "If not why are we there?" He also mentioned his Senate vote that opposed authorizing the war in Iraq.



DEFINING SUCCESS: Princeton area subjects interviewed in Herb Greenberg and Patrick Sweeney's new book, Succeed On Your Own Terms (McGraw Hill $21.95), are Congressman Rush Holt (D - 12), architect Michael Graves, and Governor Jon Corzine.

New Outdoor Sculpture At Michener Art Museum

As part of its ongoing Outdoor Sculpture Program, the James A. Michener Art Museum in Doylestown, Pa. will be exhibiting "Phoenix," a sculpture installation by Philadelphia sculptor Joe Mooney, from July 29 through October 29.

Sponsored by Premier Bank, the Outdoor Sculpture Program highlights the work of contemporary American sculptors. Mr. Mooney's "Phoenix" series features six new sculpture pieces in welded steel that often reflect the human body as well as animal and bird forms. He uses hard, cold, rigid, heavy-gauge steel to create forms that seem to be the an tithesis of the raw material. The sculptor enjoys the contrast between the heavy steel and the seemingly airy and weightless designs that emerge from his oxy-acetylene torch. He also pays close attention to the bases for his sculptures: "It's what grounds the work," he said. "From that solid, rational foundation, the spirit can take off."

Mr. Mooney received his art training at Penn State University and Alfred University, and has had more than 70 solo and group exhibitions of his work at such institutions as the State Museum of Pennsylvania, the Woodmere Art Museum, and Widener University.

The James A Michener Art Museum is located at 138 South Pine Street, Doylestown and at 500 Union Square Drive in New Hope. For gallery hours and admission information, call (215) 340-9800 or www.michenerartmuseum.org.

Child Support Responsibility Remains with Biological Father

In a recently decided Appellate Division case captioned J.R. v. L.R., the Appellate Division reaffirmed a long-standing principle that a biological parent has an ongoing obligation to support his child even in the event he was unaware that the child was his. This decision should serve as notice for all potential fathers that they must be proactive in determining whether or not a child born by a woman with whom they had a relationship is in fact theirs. Failure to confirm paternity will not necessarily eliminate the obligation to pay child support. If there is deception or interference of parenting by the mother or psychological parent, such conduct may, in extreme cases, relieve the biological parent of his support obligation.

In the case of J.R. v. L.R., the Appellate Court held that under the New Jersey Parentage Act, "The fact that the natural father was unaware of the existence of his twelve-year-old daughter" served as an insufficient basis to deny the child's mother's application for genetic testing in order to establish paternity and thereby establish a child support obligation on the alleged father. In order to protect the rights and interests of the alleged father, that individual would be well advised to seek a paternity test at the soonest possible time after learning that the child may in fact be his. Ignoring the situation and hoping that it does not become an issue at a later date will not allow a father to evade his responsibility to support his child. Child support can include an obligation to contribute towards college expenses.

In an effort to realize some fair resolution to this matter and also to ensure that the financial needs of the child in question were being met, the Court did find it proper to split the child support obligation between the natural father and the psychological father upon finding that "the natural father was unable to pay the entire amount of child support."

This case is important because it reaffirms two separate but interrelated principles. The first being that parents will not easily be able to evade the financial responsibilities owed to their children. The second principle, evidenced by the Court's willingness to split the child support obligation between both the natural and psychological father, is that the child should not be deprived of the financial resources necessary to ensure that the child is being properly supported and cared for.

THE PIEDMONT REGION: The subject of all but two of Robert Bonotto's 16 works in the family show, "Three Generations of Artists" now at Lambertville's J.B. Kline & Gallery, is Italy's Piedmont region, shown here with lines indicating some of the sites featured in Mr. Bonotto's ink and watercolor creations. The show will continue through the month of July.

"MOONLIT LANDSCAPE": This example of a sepia monochromatic wash drawing by British artist Samuel Palmer (1805-1881) was done ca. 1828/30 and is among several of his works on view this summer at the Princeton University Art Museum. The artist was mesmerized by spectacular nocturnal effects, with the moon figuring prominently in many of his compositions. The museum is open to the public without charge Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. It is closed on Monday and major holidays. Free highlights tours of the collection are given every Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. The museum is located in the middle of the Princeton University campus, next to Prospect House and Gardens. For further information, call (609) 258-3788, or visit www.princetonartmuseum.org.

Art of Bonotto Family In Lambertville Show

J.B. Kline & Gallery of Lambertville is currently presenting "Three Generations of Artists" featuring two oil paintings by Constance Bonotto (1899-1993), who taught at the Princeton YWCA for 30 years; hand-colored watercolor prints by her son Sergio, a Princeton resident; photographic prints by her grandson Michael, also a Princeton resident; and mixed media works by grandson Robert, a former classical music manager at the Princeton Record Exchange who now resides in Boston.

While Sergio's prints focus on the Hopewell area, and Michael's photography on Vermont, the largest and most diverse group of works is by Robert, whose focal point is the area of northwest Italy known as the Piedmont. His first teacher was his mother, whose first teacher was a member of the Piedmontese School.

According to Robert, who is also an actor (he once performed at Hopewell's Off-Broad-Street Theatre) and composer (his latest opera opened at the Boston Theatre Marathon), the idea for the exhibit came about after a recent visit to Lambertville's J.B. Kline & Gallery on 25 Bridge Street. In his comments provided with the list of works, he says that he, his father, and grandmother exhibited nearly 20 years ago at the Off-Broad-Street theatre, and that most of his artwork expresses "a heartfelt love for the environs of Turin." Some titles suggest the range of the work: "Romeo and Juliet Balcony, Pinerolo"; "The Saluzzo Clock"; and "Torino: The River Po by Night." Although the Torino painting is an oil, he describes most of his art as "a combination of pen and ink, opaque watercolor...all done on pastel paper."

The exhibit will run through July. The hours are Tuesday through Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m. The gallery is closed on Monday.

"TREES AND HUMANS: AN ENDURING RELATIONSHIP"

Throughout history, people have been influenced by trees, attributing to them a symbolism that affects not only our everyday life but also the afterlife. Since the dawn of time, people have attributed magical and supernatural powers to trees, enabling them to occupy a specific place in human imagination. Represented abundantly in paintings and in literature, trees are omnipresent in oral and written traditions all over the world. Trees are a fundamental sacred symbol of countless cultures and religions.

Trees continue to fascinate, to trigger passions, and to impose respect. Trees are immutable witnesses to the passing of time, to events, to those who planted and respected them throughout the years as they grow.

In 1865, Frederick Law Olmsted, the renowned American landscape architect, said that visual contact with trees and nature in general was beneficial to the physical and psychological well-being of city dwellers to help alleviate the tension associated with the hectic lifestyle in big cities. Who among us has never meditated under a tree when our private world was abruptly shaken by unexpected events?

For human beings, trees are a unique model of serenity, wisdom, and patience. No one would dare question the majestic tranquility created by the reassuring presence of large trees and the calming effect they have on us when we walk under their vaults.

Saint Bernard de Clairvaux said, "You will find more in forests than in books. Trees and rocks will teach you things that no master will tell you."

Enjoy your summer and your trees,

"Manners are the happy way of doing things".

TAWA Salon Show Opening Celebrates ARTWORKS

Trenton Artist Workshop Association will present its first summer exhibit showcase on Saturday, July 22, at ARTWORKS, 19 Everett Alley at Stockton Street in downtown Trenton. A free and open-to-the-public reception and ceremony is set for from 6 to 8 p.m. on the same day.

Entitled "TAWA Salon Show 2006," the floor-to-ceiling exhibition evokes the spirit of 19th Century exhibitions of new work and celebrates the vibrancy of both the Greater Mercer County Arts Community and the Trenton visual arts center ARTWORKS.

The exhibit, which continues until Sunday, August 13, includes works by numerous established and emerging regional artists and stretches across genres, styles, and generations.

ARTWORKS, one of the oldest new art centers in Trenton, is at the center of a municipal controversy because the building has been slated for closure to accommodate condominiums. The "TAWA Salon Show 2006" was developed to demonstrate why ARTWORKS is a vital part of the greater Mercer County Art Community and a great asset for the city of Trenton.

At the July 22 reception, TAWA also will present the winners of its annual Emma Jane Stockton Memorial Scholarship Award and Holman Photography Scholarship Award. Both awards are in support of talented art students in the community and based on strong recommendations by area teachers.

This year's Stockton Scholarship will go to Beatrice Davis, 2006 graduate of Trenton Central High School. The scholarship will be applied to the first year of art studies for Ms. Davis, who has been accepted at Moore College of Art and Design in Philadelphia. She will be working toward becoming a fashion designer.

This year's Holman Photography Scholarship Award will be awarded to Joseph Q. Greenfield, student in photography at Mercer County Community College. The scholarship award will be used for his continuing studies in photography. He is planning a career as a photo journalist.

For exhibition hours, call ARTWORKS at (609) 394-9436.

"COMPUTER PAINTING 2": Al Aronson's digital print made with a graphics quality inkjet printer is on display as part of "New Jersey Voices I," which will be at the Montgomery Center for the Arts at the 1860 House in Skillman through August 6.

Golandsky Festival To End Week Here With Three Concerts

The Golandsky Institute international Piano Festival will conclude its week of seminars and performances at Princeton University with three concerts this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings at Taplin Auditorium in Fine Hall. The concerts will feature pianist Janice Weber tomorrow, July 20; pianist Yehudi Wyner with soprano Dominique Labelle on Friday; and The Herskowitz Rozenblatt Project, a jazz trio, on Saturday. All of the concerts will be at 8 p.m. in Princeton University's Taplin Auditorium.

Ms. Weber is a summa cum laude graduate of the Eastman School of Music. "She is a piano master," raved The Boston Globe. "The gods gave her a phenomenal natural gift for the instrument."

Since graduating from Eastman, Ms. Weber has appeared with the American Composers Orchestra, Boston Civic Symphony, Boston Pops, Chautauqua Symphony, New Hampshire Symphony, Sarajevo Philharmonic, Sarasota Pops, and Syracuse Symphony. Her solo performances have been at the White House, Carnegie Hall, Wigmore Hall, Weill Hall, National Gallery of Art, Boston's Symphony Hall, the 92nd Street YMCA, Merkin Hall, and the Newport Festival. She has also toured Yugoslavia, Turkey, and the Baltic States under the auspices of the U.S. Information Service. At the invitation of the American Liszt Society, she recently presented recitals and master classes in Beijing, Shenyang, Xian, and Chengdu, China.

Currently a member of the piano faculty at the Boston Conservatory, Ms. Weber now performs regularly with the Boston Conservatory Chamber Players. She has been an adjudicator for the National Endowment for the Arts and has served on many competition juries. Her recordings include Rachmaninoff's complete transcriptions with the Lydian Quartet and Liszt's last Hungarian Rhapsody, for which she won the International Liszt Prize. She is also a writer. Her third novel, Frost the Fiddler (St. Martin's Press) was named a Notable Book of the Year by the New York Times. She has also written two screenplays and is currently at work on her sixth novel

On Friday, July 21, pianist Yehudi Wyner will perform with soprano Dominique Labelle. A composer, pianist, conductor, and educator, Mr. Wyner was born in 1929 in Western Canada, but grew up in New York City. He came into a musical family. His father, Lazar Weiner, was a notable creator of liturgical music for the modem synagoque.

After graduating from the Juilliard School with a diploma in piano, Mr. Wyner went on to study at Yale and Harvard Universities with composers Richard Donovan, Walter Piston, and Paul Hindemith. A Handel course at Harvard brought him to the attention of Randall Thompson, who became a staunch supporter and friend. In 1953, Mr. Wyner won the Rome Prize in Composition, which enabled him to live for the next three years at the American Academy in Rome, composing, playing, and traveling. Upon his return to America he began an active career as a musician. In the course of this work he has been a solo pianist, chamber musician, director of two opera companies, conductor of numerous chamber and vocal ensembles, composer, and teacher.

On Saturday, the Festival will make a departure from classical to jazz music with a concert by The Herskowitz Rozenblatt Project, a trio of jazz piano, bass, and drums. Featuring Matt Herskowitz on piano, David Rozenblatt on drums, and Mat Fieldes on bass, the group has toured nationally and internationally. its debut CD, Forget me Not, was released last September.

Mr. Herskowitz, of Montreal, is also a composer. He has performed and recorded as a solo artist, as well as with HRP and other collaborating groups. Mr. Rozenblatt, originally from the Ukraine, has performed with many well-known stars in the pop, jazz, and classical fields. Mr. Fieldes plays regularly with the Brooklyn Philharmonic and New Jersey Symphony, in addition to several contemporary ensembles and rock bands. All three musicians are Juilliard-trained.

Concert tickets are $20.

FESTIVAL FINISHERS: The Herskowitz Rozenblatt Project, a trio of jazz piano, bass, and drums, will conclude the week-long series of Golandsky Institute International Piano Festival concerts when they appear this Saturday, July 22 at 8 p.m. in Princeton University's Taplin Auditorium. The musicians are, from left, drummer David Rozenblatt, pianist Matt Herskowitz, and bassist Mat Fieldes. The Festival has been presented concurrently this week with the Institute's Summer Symposium, which features lectures and demonstrations in the Taubman Technique of piano pedagogy. The remaining performance schedule also includes concerts by pianist Janice Weber tomorrow, July 20, and pianist Yehudi Wyner, with soprano Dominique Labelle, on Friday, July 21. Concert tickets are $20.

Vintage Music Concert Set at Cranbury Church

A free concert of vintage music by singer-guitarist Ken Lelen will be held at Cranbury's United Methodist Church on Friday, July 28 at 7 p.m. The concert will be presented by the Cranbury Township Recreation Commission.

Mr. Lelen sings ragtime and swing tunes popular during the 1920s, '30s and '40s while playing vintage acoustic guitars from the same decades. "People of all ages love these songs," he said, "and they're pleasantly surprised by the robust sound and good looks of the vintage acoustic guitars."

A Titusville resident, Mr. Lelen has played guitar for more than 40 years. He performs on vintage guitars made by Gibson, Martin, Regal, Vega, Washburn, and other American instruments. Built between 1912 and 1960, his acoustic guitars produce sounds that are striking for their color, tone, and sustain. His songs focus "on love lost, found, discarded or denied," he says. "Don't blame me if you catch the blues," he sings. "I've got a case myself I've been trying to lose."

A journalist for 27 years before launching his music career in 1999, Mr. Lelen now performs at acoustic music clubs, arts centers, bookstores, cafes, churches, historic societies, libraries, museums, retirement villages, and social clubs. "His songs will never go out of date," said The New York Times.

The United Methodist Church is located on School House Lane in Cranbury.

For more information, call (609) 395-8836.

Busy Concert Schedule Coutinues at Westminster

A full schedule of summer musical offerings will continue next week at Westminster Choir College, from Sunday, July 23 through Saturday, July 29. All events will be held in the school's Bristol Chapel and are open to the public at no charge.

On Sunday, July 23 at 5 p.m., a CoOPERAtive Master Class will be presented by Daniel Beckwith. CoOPERAtive is a three-week intensive opera training program at Westminster concluding July 29 that focuses on operatic style, performance techniques, dramatic presentation, language and diction, body awareness, resume and application advice. Directed by Westminster voice faculty members Laura Brooks Rice and Christopher Arneson, the program is presented in cooperation and consultation with opera professionals and is designed to help young singers 19 and older prepare for acceptance in an advanced young artist or summer apprentice program.

Mr. Beckwith has conducted in many of the major opera houses throughout North America and Europe. He served as assistant to James Levine for six seasons at the Metropolitan Opera and had his conducting debut with Don Giovonni in 1995. He has since had many engagements with The New York City Opera, Washington Opera, Cincinnati Opera, Calgary Opera, Canadian Opera Company, Edmonton Opera, Wolftrap Opera Festival, Lyric Opera of Chicago, Opera Theatre of St. Louis, Seattle Opera, Utah Opera, UK's Opera North, Florida Grand Opera, Cleveland Opera, Opera Columbus, Chautauqua Opera, and Opera Festival of New Jersey.

A public hymn sing will be held on Monday, July 24 at 7:30 p.m., led by Mark Trautman. Mr. Trautman has performed throughout the Northeast as an accompanist, conductor, and organist in concert and on radio and television. Since 1994, he has served as director of music at Christ Church, New Brunswick, where he conducts the choir and coordinates the award-winning Noonday Recital Series. He also serves on the faculties of New Brunswick Theological Seminary and the Mason Gross School of the Arts at Rutgers University.

Allen Crowell, a professor of choral music and director of choral studies at the University of Georgia, will conduct audience members in a choral reading session of Beethoven's Mass in C on Tuesday, July 25 at 7:30 p.m. Prof. Crowell previously taught and conducted at Westminster for 20 years. A native of Mobile, Ala., he studied at Florida State University and earned his bachelor's degree from Westminster Choir College in 1959. He recently received an honorary doctorate from Westminster in recognition of his accomplishments as a conductor and singer. Choral participants are asked to bring their own scores; however, a limited number will be available for borrowing at the door.

On Wednesday, July 26 at 7:30 p.m. the first of two final aria recitals will be presented as part of the CoOPERAtive program.

On Thursday, July 27 at 7:30 pianist Radek Materka will present a recital. A doctoral candidate in piano performance at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, Mr. Materka holds music degrees from Westminster (B.M.), and U.S.C. (M.M.). He has performed at the Weill Recital Hall of Carnegie Hall and the Walt Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles, and in Europe and Asia. During the summers, he joins the faculty of the Westminster Piano Camp for high school students.

The final aria recital of the CoOPERAtive program will be presented on Saturday, July 29 at 4 p.m.

21ST CENTURY of DENTISTRY
Presented by Michael A. Wasyl, D.D.S.
PREHISTORIC DENTISTRY
The first mention of dentistry, according to the American Dental Association, comes from an ancient Sumerian text (5,000 B.C.), which identified "tooth worms" as the cause of dental decay. At the time, mention was made of a doctor, who "deal(t) with teeth." Now, scientists have uncovered evidence that dentistry goes back almost 9,000 years. In Pakistan, archeologists uncovered teeth with precisely drilled holes. Because the teeth were molars, which were not given to decoration, scientists believe the holes were drilled to remove decay. Examination of the holes with an electron microscope shows that they were drilled by rotating a rod (with a stone tip) vigorously between the palms of the dentist. Any filling material has been lost to the ages.
A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. Yet many people avoid smiling because they are concerned about the condition of their teeth. Many times we underestimate the value of investing in improving our smile. We emphasize preventive, functional, and cosmetic dental care. Please call 609-924-8300 to schedule an appointment. You are important to us as a person – not just a patient. We're located at Montgomery Knoll, 192 Tamarack Circle, Skillman, where we are currently accepting new patients. Let us help you smile with confidence. Our commitment is to relationships of partnership, respect, and appreciation.
P.S. A tooth with a precisely drilled hole found in a Colorado burial site dating back 1,000 years is the only evidence of early dentistry in this country.

McCarter, ARB, George Street Playhouse Among Dodge Foundation Grant Winners

The Trustees of the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation, Morristown, have announced their approval of over $4.3 million in 2006 arts grants. Ninety-five grants were made to museums and galleries, community and media arts organizations, and performing arts organizations in theater, dance, and music throughout the state of New Jersey.

Local grant recipients and their awards were the George Street Playhouse in New Brunswick, which received the Foundation's largest grant of $175,000; New Jersey Opera Theatre of Princeton, which received $20,000; American Repertory Ballet, New Brunswick, $90,000; and McCarter Theatre, $135,000.

The grants also went to a variety of organizations that provide services to the arts field and to New Jersey artists.

A total of $1,057,410 in previously announced grants to arts organizations, made in the Foundation's Education docket, brought the total of Dodge arts funding in 2006 to $5,378,910.

"The Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation is proud to support New Jersey's creative community," said David Grant, the Foundation's president and CEO. "As the program staff and I traveled the state throughout the year to witness arts programming, we have seen firsthand the power of the arts to transform communities and the lives of residents of all ages."

"The arts are making a difference in communities throughout the state, from small rural hamlets to large urban centers," added Laura Aden, the Foundation's program director for the arts. "Our state's arts institutions are making meaningful connections every day with their audiences, with artists, and with each other, and we are pleased to provide support that helps enhance these vital relationships."

In addition to the George Street Playhouse, three other organizations received the Foundation's largest grant of $175,000 — the Shakespeare Theatre of New Jersey in Madison, New Jersey Symphony Orchestra in Newark, and The Newark Museum.

Other grants of note included $75,000 to Appel Farm Arts & Music Center in Elmer, $105,000 each to the Montclair Art Museum and Wheaton Village in Millville, $100,000 to the New Jersey Theatre Alliance in Morristown and WBGO-FM in Newark, $80,000 to Nai Ni Chen Dance Company in Fort Lee, and $70,000 to the Perkins Center for the Arts in Moorestown, which included a $10,000 grant to support the "green" (environmentally sound) planning process and architectural design of the Center's new facility in Collingswood.

The Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation was established in 1974 through the foresight of Geraldine Rockefeller Dodge. Its five areas of giving are the arts, education, environment, Morristown initiatives, and welfare of animals.

For more information, including a complete list of grant recipients, visit the Dodge Foundation's website at www.grdodge.org.

"BEAT" GENERATION: A dancer with Music & Motion Dance Productions illustrates the focus of the dances to be presented on Sunday, August 6 at Grounds For Sculpture: to blend in with the landscaped grounds and contemporary sculptures at the 35-acre sculpture park. The dance company will present excerpts of its new dance work, "To A Different Beat," throughout the park from noon to 3 p.m. The complete work will have its premiere at the Philly Fringe & Live Arts Festival in September. Known for exploring fusions of rhythm and dance set to modern global music, the troupe, comprising pre-professional dancers 15 to 19 years of age, is directed by Steven Weisz. The performance will be free with admission to the grounds, which is $12 per person. Grounds For Sculpture is located at 18 Fairgrounds Road, Hamilton.

Local Teen to Present Dramatic Excerpts

Reality — or illusion? That's the theme 16-year-old Abby Mycek of Belle Mead will explore in a short one-woman showcase on Thursday, July 27 at 2:30 p.m. at Holsome Teas and Herbs on Witherspoon Street.

The presentation will feature excerpts from William Shakespeare and Tennessee Williams.

Ms. Mycek will be directed by Broadway actor and independent film-maker James Ludwig of New York City. The pair met in 2000 during McCarter Theater's annual production of A Christmas Carol. They appeared together in the production for four consecutive years before beginning one-on-one study in 2004.

The show will include monologues by Sebastian, from Twelfth Night, and Portia, from Julius Caesar, along with Ms. Mycek's own writing.

Mr. Ludwig is currently a member of the Broadway company of Monty Python's Spomolot, directed by Mike Nichols.

Ms. Mycek has appeared at McCarter Theater, the Princeton Rep Shakespeare Festival, New Jersey Opera Festival, and most recently, in the New Jersey Opera Theater production of Elixir of Love. She will be a junior at Montgomery High School in the fall.

Admission will be free, with tea served after the performance.

Student Film Festival At Library Tomorrow

The third annual Princeton Student Film and Video Festival will take place tomorrow night, July 20 at the Princeton Public Library at 7 p.m. A total of 19 original films, ranging in length from one to 20 minutes, will be screened.

The event is free and suggested for a teen and adult audience. Following the screenings, some of the student filmmakers will talk about their work and answer questions.

The film topics are diverse, as are the film-makers, who hail from schools from New York to California. Among them are six local students: Skillman resident R. Reed French, who now attends the New School in New York City; Ben Saltzman, a 2005 graduate of Princeton High School now attending NYU; Curran Bhatia, a 2004 graduate of West Windsor-Plainsboro High School North who has just completed his second year at NYU; Henry Loevner, a student at The Lawrenceville School; Brendan Dean of Princeton, who will be a senior this fall at Princeton High School; and Akshay Rathod, a West Windsor resident and 2006 graduate of The Lawrenceville School.

Mr. French has two entries in the Festival: Distant Romance, in which a young man watches his secret love while his true nature is slowly revealed; and The Last Man Breathing, a short comedy about a contest between a man and woman to see who can hold their breath longer underwater.

Duel of the Sky, by Mr. Saltzman, makes use of still shots set to music in a rooftop action narrative.

In Mr. Bhatia's film, The Kid, a young poker player must see if he can recover from a big loss and try to win again.

Lily, by Mr. Loevner and two fellow students at Lawrenceville, is described as a "haunting mystery."

Self Control, by Mr. Dean, is a short feature film with special effects that depicts a character's self-conflict.

Via Lactea, by Mr. Rathod and Justin Scott, is a story about love and the thoughts of a young man missing his girlfriend.

Following is a complete list of the Festival's selected films, in alphabetical order: Annaying Dog, by Mark Sanders and Thomas Schuster; Archetype/Identity X, by Darin DiNapoli; Bullets in the Hood, by Terrence Fisher and Daniel Howard; The Culture, by Harrison Rego; Distant Romance, by R. Reed French; Duel of the Sky, by Ben Saltzman; The Evil Camera, by Brandon Eastin; The Heart is a Muscle, by Emily Kowalczyk; Inner City Blues, by Jocelyn "Monet" Rodriguez; The Kid, by Curran Bhatia; Kingdom by the Sea, by Barbara Lago; The Last Man Breathing, by Mr. French; Lily, by Henry Loevner; Expectations, by Gilberto Francisco; Self Control, by Brendan Dean; The Tortoise, by Daniel Sanchez; Via Lactea by Akshay Rathod and Justin Scott; Vaices: Hearing the Homeless, by Tola Brennan, Francine Floy, Cindy Lam, Anthony Limong, Anhelaisha Montmory, and Barrington Thompson; and War of Words: Communication of the Anti-Soviet Message During the Cold War, by Gina Bull.

The Festival is coordinated and organized by Teen Services Librarian Susan Conlon.

Shakespeare Festival Sets "Twelfth Night" Opening

The Princeton Rep Company/Princeton Rep Shakespeare Festival will open its original version of Twelfth Night at The Pettoranello Gardens Amphitheatre on Thursday, July 27, with previews starting tomorrow evening, July 20. The production is set in the mid 1960s on Monhegan Island, Maine. With original music by composer Adam Gwon, the show incorporates the signature sounds of the 1960s.

Twelfth Night will be directed by Victoria Liberatori and produced by Alexandra Hoge.

Shakespeare's last great comedy, written before he moved into the period of his great tragedies, Twelfth Night is rich in character and exploration of the permutations of love. It has been compared to the classic Billy Wilder film Some Like It Hot with its scenes of gender bending, mistaken identity, and gender disguise.

Ms. Liberatori chose to set the production in the 1960s because of the many parallels between that period and the original setting of Twelfth Night. "The title of the play is Twelfth Night or What You Will," she said. "The Elizabethan meaning of the word 'will' involved desire, in particular sexual desire. One of the preoccupations of the '60s was an exploration of sexual license and expression. Slogans like 'follow your bliss' parallel the disregard for societal strictures in Twelfth Night where the objects of the characters' affections are not determined by class or gender, and they fall in love with whomever they please."

The cast will include local actors Vivia Font, Chris Osander, and Daniel Marmion.

Ms. Font, daughter of Princeton Public Library Assistant Director Elba Barzelatto, will make her professional Princeton debut as Olivia. She has been living and working in New York as an actress for the past few years after moving there from Highland Park. She attended Stuart Country Day School and participated in summer Shakespeare at the McCarter.

Mr. Osander (Antonio/Sea Captain) is a Princeton native and Shakespeare acting teacher. "I am excited to be in an Equity production, which means working with actors who are more seasoned than I am," he said.

Mr. Marmion (Valentine/Officer/Priest) graduated from NYU and studied at the Stella Adler studio in New York. He recently toured with the Aquila Theater Company in Hamlet and in an original adaptation of The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. He is the co-founder of Allanthus Theatre Company in Brooklyn.

Twelfth Night will run through August 27 at Pettoranello Gardens Amphitheater in Community Park North on Route 206 at Mountain Avenue. Show times are Thursday through Sunday at 8 p.m. The show is free with a suggested $10 donation.

For more information, tickets, or Bard Cards, call (609) 921-3682 or visit www.princetonrep.org.

"SWANKING": The South African cultural phenomenon known as "swanking" is explored in the documentary film "The Swenkas," which will be screened tomorrow evening, July 20 at 7 p.m. at the New Jersey State Museum in Trenton as part of the Newark Black Film Festival. The filmmaker, Danish director Jeppe Ronde, will participate in a question-and-answer session following the screening. "Swanking," according to the filmmaker, "is about looking good, finding the finest clothes, and wearing it with swagger." Every Saturday night, in post-apartheid South Africa, a small group of working-class Zulu men take great pride in putting on a flashy suit and stylish shoes as they go "swanking," a social competition for the honor of winning and being admired by their peers. Set in modern day Johannesburg, "The Swenkas" tells an African story of hope and celebration. Now celebrating its 32nd year, the Newark Black Film Festival is the longest running black film festival in the United States. The Trenton screenings, which are free, will continue on Thursdays through August 10.

CINEMA REVIEW — Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest

A Swashbuckling Spectacular With Captain Jack & Company

If you liked Pirates of the Caribbean, you'll enjoy the latest installment as much as you enjoyed the original. After all, Johnny Depp and the rest of the principal cast have returned, along with director Gore Verbinski; scriptwriters Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio, Stuart Beattie, and Jay Wolpert; cinematographer Darius Wolski; costume designer Penny Rose; Editors Craig Wood and Stephen Rivkin; visual effects supervisor John Knoll; stunt coordinator George Marshall Ruge; makeup artist Ve Neill; hair stylist Martin Samuel; and most of the rest of the original off-screen team.

SIXTEEN MEN ON A DEAD MAN'S CHEST: Captain Jack (Johnny Depp) has finally found the chest he has been searching for and will find a something inside vastly different than a treasure trove of gold and jewels. (Photo © Walt Disney Pictures, all rights reserved.)

Pirates 2, as a sequel, is visually almost indistinguishable from the first film. Captain Jack Sparrow may have added a few new tics to his eccentric assortment of facial mannerisms, and the special effects are more spectacular, however, the movie, like the first, is a tale of intrigue, romance, and horror.

One of the film's objectives is to prepare the audience for the finale, a situation that is common to the second movie in many trilogies. This is a tad frustrating because the movie ends on a cliffhanger in order to ensure that you will see the final installment.

But to be honest, I had no complaints prior to that development because I found myself caught up in the multi-layered mystery which picks up where the first one left off. At the point of departure, we find Will Turner (Orlando Bloom) and Elizabeth Swann (Keira Knightley) putting their wedding plans on hold because they have been arrested and sentenced to be executed for aiding and abetting Captain Jack's escape.

The couple is granted a reprieve provided Will tracks down Jack and returns with the elusive Captain's magical compass. What ensues is a special effects extravaganza during which our heroes encounter wave after wave of creatures such as cannibals, zombies, slaves, ghosts, a headless hermit crab man, squid-faced Davy Jones (Bill Nighy), and a hammerheaded shark man.

However, despite all the eye-popping distractions, Pirates 2 remains a Johnny Depp vehicle, in which he steals every scene in his own inimitable fashion.

Excellent (★★★½). Rated PG-13 for frightening images and intense adventure violence. Running time: 150 minutes. Studio: Walt Disney.

Directed by Robert Altman, the action unfolds both on and offstage on the night of what looks like the final broadcast, given the announcement that the show has been acquired by a corporate conglomerate which has decided to pull the plug on the popular program. Ensemble cast includes Lindsay Lohan, Meryl Streep, Tommy Lee Jones, Woody Harrelson, Lily Tomlin, Virginia Madsen, Matthew Modine, John C. Reilly and Saturday Night Live's Maya Rudolph.

A Sconner Dorkly (R for sex, expletives, drugs and a violent image). Richard Linklater directs this adaptation of the Philip K. Dick novel of the same name set in America where one in five Americans havs been hired by the government to spy on the other four. Stars Keanu Reeves as an undercover cop hooked on a drug which causes its addicts to develop a split personality. With Winona Ryder, Woody Harrelson and Robert Downey, Jr.

Superman Returns (PG-13 for violence). Brandon Routh takes over the title role for a new chapter in the life of the Man of Steel as he returns from Krypton to learn that Lois Lane (Kate Bosworth) is a single mother with a child that might be his and to find his arch-enemy Lex Luthor (Kevin Spacey) hatching yet another diabolical plot. Great Caesar's ghost! Back cast includes Frank Langella, James Marsden, Parker Posey, Eva Marie Saint and Kal Penn.

Water (Unrated). Feminist Deepa Mehta's long overdue final installment of her elemental trilogy, also including Fire (1996), and Eorth (1998), films which triggered riots and theater burnings before being banned for exploring political and religious themes like lesbianism and Hindu-Muslim romance. This film, set in the thirties during the rise of resistance to British rule, revolves around the relationship between a woman widowed at the age of eight and raised in an ashram and a suitor from a lower caste who's a devout follower of Mahatma Gandhi.

Who Killed the Electric Car? (PG for mild epithets). Documentary examines the role of the American auto industry in the elimination of the pollution free electric automobile in order to ensure the country's continued dependence on cars with internal combustion engines which consume copious quantities of gasoline.

Wordploy (PG for profanity and mature themes). Documentary examines the work of Will Shortz, longtime editor of the New York Times' crossword puzzle. With cameos by Ken Burns, Bob Dole, Jon Stewart, and Bill Clinton.

You, Me ond Dupree (PG-13 for sexual references and off-color humor). Comedy about a couple of newlyweds (Matt Dillon and Kate Hudson) who come to regret allowing their best man (Owen Wilson) to crash on their couch when he turns into the proverbial guest that won't leave. With Michael Douglas and Amanda Detmer.

Princeton Care Center on Bunn Drive Offers Skilled Service for Residents

Providing qualified, compassionate care, a congenial environment, and stimulation through a variety of activities and events are the priorities of the Princeton Care Center.

For people whose physical or mental condition make long-term care a necessity, the Princeton Care Center is an option. Formerly the

IT'S NEW To Us

Princeton Nursing Home on Quarry Street, it reopened at 728 Bunn Drive three years ago, and offers skilled nursing care.

"I am very proud of this facility, says Administrator Jeffrey D. First, MPA, LNHA. "We are family-owned, and William Bogner is a hands-on owner, who comes in several times a week. He is always thinking about what's best for the residents."

119 residents can be accommodated in the 65,000-square foot, 3-story facility, which features spacious private and semi-private rooms, all scrupulously clean, as well as attractively landscaped grounds.

Long-term care, including respite and hospice services, expanded Alzheimer's and dementia care, and sub-acute care (skilled and rehabilitation care) are available.

Among the features are a centrally-situated nurse's station for each unit, lounge/recreation room on each unit, physical therapy gym, occupational therapy suite, and attractive dining rooms.

Social Services

Medical services include 24-hour skilled nursing, multi-specialty physicians, dental, podiatry, audiology, and pharmaceutical specialists, and a dietician for personalized counseling and meal-planning. Beauty parlor and barber services are also offered.

In addition, family and resident counseling, family educational services, family and resident care conferences, and discharge planning are under the auspices of the Social Services Department.

The decision to enter a long-term care facility is one of the most difficult a person can face, and the staff at the Princeton Care Center is very much aware of this, says Mr. First. "We have social workers and a support group to help families cope with the decision and what is very important here is the quality of life and the quality of care.

"We are fortunate to have people on our staff with a lot of empathy and understanding. They are dedicated and highly-trained."

"When a new resident comes to the facility, we meet with them and the family," adds Lori Rahn, Director of Social Services. "We get a social history — information about their life, work, family, and their health."

She points out that although "Most of our elders are very pragmatic and resilient, the hardest thing when they come is that they have lost their independence. We know this, and we tell them 'this is a place of continuing living, and we do everything we possibly can to make your life acceptable to you.

Pet Visits

"I enjoy the residents so much," she continues. " I learn from their experiences. They have amazing stories, and sometimes you can make a special connection. They enrich me every day, and there is never a day I don't look forward to coming. For me, coming to work is a joy."

A variety of activities is available to residents, and they are encouraged to participate to the extent they are able. Activities are tailored to the individual. Bingo, gardening, flower arranging, painting, cooking, exercise programs, religious services, entertainment (singers, poetry reading, sing-a-longs), in-room movies, and pet visits are all offered.

"We believe that activities are the heartbeat of the community here," points out Karen Oltarzewski, Director of Therapeutic Activities. "This is definitely a place to live, not to die. It is very important to validate the residents, respect them as human beings." she adds.

"We try to offer as much activity and stimulation as we can. We have events the residents look forward to, including outdoor barbecues and outings for those who are able. We take them to restaurants, to the boardwalk at the shore, and of course, their families can take them out too."

HELPING HANDS: "We offer a very individualized, personalized rehabilitation program," says Harsha Amin (left), Director of Rehabilitation Therapy at the Princeton Care Center. With her assistant, Meenakshi Patel, she demonstrates an exercise to help increase balance, core stability, and spinal mobility.

Ms. Oltarzewski reports that the residents especially look forward to the arrival of the pet therapy dog that comes every other week. "The dog is very friendly; the people love it, and really respond."

Both long-term residents and short-term sub acute patients (those who require specific physical therapy after a stroke, injury, surgery, hip/knee replacement, etc.) participate in rehabilitation care, which includes physical, occupational, restorative, and recreational therapy, and cardiac recovery.

Great Facility

"We see patients and residents on a regular basis," says Harsha Amin, Director of Rehabilitation Therapy. "Long-term residents come as often as they can, five times a week, if appropriate. We offer functional maintenance and restorative programs, and work on physical strength and balance. It is very individualized."

"We have a great facility, and we look forward to making it even better," says Mr. First, who has been in skilled nursing care for 20 years, serving in a variety of positions, including vice president of a medical center. "We also believe it is important to give back to the community, and we are planning a health fair, offering free blood work, cholesterol and blood pressure checks, etc. for the community in October.

"We will also be getting a swing set, so when children visit, they can play, and the residents will enjoy watching them," pointing out that bonding between the generations is a positive experience for both ends of the age spectrum.

Medicare, Medicaid, and private insurance are accepted by the Princeton Care Center, and currently, there are two openings available. For further information, call (609) 924-9000.

Join us at 11 AM on Saturday, July 29th for a charity event self-guided pond tour bringing us into the beautiful–and often private–world of water gardens. A Longtime Princeton Favorite Offers New Dining Experience

A lunch or dinner at Sotto, the new Italian restaurant at 128½ Nassau Street, is not just eating out — it is a dining experience. The good food, warm and welcoming atmosphere invite customers to relax and linger.

What is more, although Sotto just opened its doors last March, it has a history. Located at the site of the longtime Princeton favorite, The Annex, it is owned by four cousins, Joseph and Richard Carnevale, former owners of The Annex, and John and Tino Procaccini, former owners of La Principessa Restaurant in Kingston. They decided to combine forces and offer a new Italian dining experience, and at the same time continue The Annex's tradition of a family-friendly ambiance, emphasizing hands-on ownership.

"We are set apart by the hands-on ownership," says John Procaccini. "It's very important to treat people right and welcome them."

"How many places are there where the owner will sit down with the guests?" adds Mr. Carnevale. "That's John. He makes people very welcome. It's a very special personal touch."

Family Recipes

And, of course, the focus is on food, with chefs Joe Carnevale and Tino Procaccini in the kitchen, creating delicious dishes, based upon the cuisine of central Italy, especially from the Pettoranello region, where both the Carnevales and Procaccinis have their roots. Family recipes are part of the menu, and the Procaccini brothers' grandparents still own an olive orchard in the Pettoranello region, where the restaurant's virgin olive oil originates.

Fresh, high quality ingredients are a priority, report Mr. Carnevale and Mr. Procaccini. All entrees are served with salad and pasta, and everything is cooked to order, "The bread, including the very popular garlic knots, is homemade, and so is the pasta."

Enthusiastic customers are enjoying a variety of Sotto's specialties, including antipasti, such as the signature Della Casa — a variety of hot and cold Italian favorites which serves four, and Portobello Ripieno — grilled Portobello mushroom stuffed with lump crabmeat, topped with melted fresh mozzarella, and finished with champagne cream sauce.

Popular entrees are Vitello alla Torre — a tower of layered grilled nature veal medallions, fresh mozzarella and grilled eggplant, served with homemade gnocchi in a basil pesto cream sauce; also Pollo alla Griglia — grilled tender breast of chicken over Yukon potatoes, sweet Italian sausage, roasted peppers and Portobello mushrooms, topped with melted mozzarella in white wine, garlic and olive oil sauce.

Risotto Frutti di Mare is another specialty with sauteed calamari, jumbo shrimp and scallops, clams, and New Zealand mussels served over creamy arborio risotto, topped with Sambuca cream sauce. Another favorite is Sotto's "Pizza Al Formo", 10-inch brick oven pizzas, with thinner crusts, available in many choices.

"Something for every taste," reports Mr. Carnevale.

Full Selection

"We are also a certified Angus steak house," notes Mr. Procaccini. "We have such favorites as Surf 'n Turf, New York strip steak, as well as veal chops, and rack of lamb."

The array of mouthwatering desserts includes gelato from Italy, among many other hard-to-resist choices. A full selection of wines and spirits is available, and Sotto plans to include monthly wine dinners. "We will have six or seven entrees with six or seven different wines," says Mr. Procaccini. "We hope to get this going soon."

Former customers of The Annex (of whom there are many, report Sotto's owners) find a completely new look. The space, which seats 140, has been completely renovated, and its unique underground location accounts for the new name, Sotto, meaning under or below in Italian.

"This is a subterranean location," point out Mr. Carnevale and Mr. Procaccini. "We wanted to change the room into a grotto and added stonework to make it look as much like a grotto and as Italian as possible. We also added a fireplace, with a semi-private area nearby for pre-lunch business meetings, offering people a chance to get to know each other."

In addition, live music, such as jazz and blues, is offered Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

Prices range from $14 to $29 for entrees, and the restaurant, which is open seven days, offers late night fare, including pasta, pizza, and wraps, from 10 p.m. to midnight. A Happy Hour from 4:30 to 6:30 Monday through Friday is also featured."

DINNER AT EIGHT: "You need as many people as possible whom you can trust on your side. Nothing is better than family. We are now a team of four, and there are always two owners out front." The owners, also cousins, of Sotto, the new Italian restaurant located at what was formerly home to The Annex, are proud to carry on the family tradition of that long-time Princeton favorite. Left to right are Tino Procaccini, Joseph Carnevale, John Procaccini, and Richard Carnevale.

Italian Tradition

The cousins (who are still best friends!) have been delighted with the enthusiastic response. "We were surprised to see how busy we were right away, and we look forward to seeing how it unfolds. We will enjoy having Princeton alumni come after the football games, as so many of them remember The Annex," says Mr. Carnevale. "One of the things we have been most pleased about is when people come in and say 'There is finally a real Italian restaurant in town."

"Also," adds Mr. Procaccini, "In the Italian tradition, we close two weeks every August. The four of us are going to Italy, back to Pettoranello, back to our roots to check out recipes, get olive oil, and regroup. It's a very refreshing time. We will be closed Aug. 6 to the 20th."

Sotto is open for lunch, Monday through Saturday 11:30 to 4; dinner 4 to 10. Sunday 4 to 9. (609) 921-7555. Reservations are recommended, especially on weekends.

Darby's Quick Rise Up Crew Ladder Lands Former PU Star on U.S. Boat

When Devan Darby joined the Princeton University women's crew program as a walk-on in 2002, she was merely looking to try something new.

"I always wanted to row but my high school didn't have it," said Darby, a native of Virginia Beach, Va., who competed in softball, soccer, swimming, and cross country during her high school years.

"I thought it would be great fun. When I was a freshman at Princeton I saw these signs around campus about joining the crew team and how you could go backwards really, really fast."

Once she took up rowing, Darby moved up the sport's ladder really, really fast. She made Princeton's top open boat by her sophomore season. This past spring, she was the team's captain and helped lead the boat to an undefeated season and the NCAA title.

This week, Darby is stepping up to another level in the sport as she rows on the U.S. women's eight at World Rowing Under-23 Championships in Hazewinkel, Belgium.

In reflecting on the opportunity to row for the U.S., Darby acknowledged that even she has been surprised by her meteoric rise in the crew world. "Never in a million years did I think this would happen," said Darby, who culminated her college career this spring by earning a slew of honors including the Art Lane Award and the Spirit of Princeton Award together with first-team All-American and All-Ivy recognition.

"I needed a lot of coaching when I started the sport. Wendy Levash [former Princeton assistant coach and current Dartmouth head coach] really helped me. The Princeton coaching staff really knows how to get every ounce of strength out of an athlete."

In Darby's view, the Tiger women's open crew utilized every ounce of strength it had as it put together a season for the ages, cruising past every boat it faced this spring and avenging a second-place finish to Cal in the 2005 NCAA championship race by beating the Bears by more than six seconds in this year's collegiate championship final.

"At the Head of Charles last fall we had a pretty amazing race coming in second even though our steering cable broke during the race," said Darby. "We knew then that we had a pretty competitive team. At the NCAA regatta, we just had confidence in our race. I remember being in the last 500 meters and just thinking get it done. We had lots of energy."

After graduating in early June, Darby applied the lessons she learned during her Princeton career at the national team try-out camp in Berkeley, Calif. "It was a different coach, a different body of water, and a completely different environment," said Darby. "Things from Princeton carried over, like focusing on the quality of every stroke."

PERFECT STORM: Head coach Lori Dauphiny, far left, and members of the Princeton University women's varsity open crew celebrate after cruising to the NCAA title this past May at Mercer Lake in West Windsor. The win culminated an undefeated season for the Tigers. Two members of that boat, Devan Darby and Gevvie Stone, will be looking for another title this week as they row for the U.S. eight at the World Rowing Under-23 Championships in Hazewinkel, Belgium.

The endurance that Darby built up at Princeton came in handy as the try-out camp included days where the rowers would hit the water for three training sessions and then do a conditioning workout on dry land.

In view of the fact that Darby has only been rowing four years, she took a nothing-to-lose attitude into the camp. "I went out there just trying to do my best," said Darby. "Just getting invited was an honor; I couldn't be disappointed no matter what happened. I was sort of pessimistic about making the boat with all of those good athletes around me. Being around people like that makes you a better athlete."

Darby's best proved good enough as she made the U.S. eight along with Princeton teammate Gevvie Stone, a rising senior. Having Stone on the crew gives Darby a comfort level as she heads into international competition for the first time.

"It's great to have someone on the boat that you know and trust," asserted Darby. "I have never been to a regatta like this; I'm not quite sure what to expect."

Having exceeded expectations ever since she started rowing, Darby believes the U-23 regatta will prove to be another memorable chapter in her rowing career.

"I just can't wait to meet the rowers from the other countries," added Darby, who is hoping to keep rowing with the U.S. program after the regatta this month with an eye to someday making the senior national team. "It's a great opportunity; I'm going to try to savor it."

Darby is proud to have made the most out of the opportunities afforded through rowing. "I think it is a sport that rewards hard work," asserted Darby. "If you can handle it and do your best, you can go far. My coaches and teammates at Princeton were such good role models."

But even those role models couldn't have imagined how far Darby would go in her first four years in the sport.

PU Crew Coach Hughes On Fast Track As He Leads U.S. Boats at U-23 Worlds

Greg Hughes is used to taking his time in molding a crew into a force.

As the head coach of the Princeton University men's lightweight crew program, Hughes has from September to April to patiently put the pieces together in picking his top three boats.

In the last month or so, Hughes has been forced to speed up the process as he prepared two boats to compete for the U.S. in the upcoming World Rowing Under-23 Championships in Hazewinkel, Belgium.

This week, Hughes will get to see the results of his hard work as his men's 8 and men's 4 with cox row in the competition with the championship finals scheduled for July 23.

"At the try-out camp you start off with 60 guys, it's like a college all-star team," said Hughes, who has been coaching in the U.S. national set-up since 1999 and helped boats to six medals including gold medals in the 1999 men's heavyweight 2+ and the 2002 men's heavyweight 8. "We invite the top athletes with the most potential. It's good to identify them and develop them for the senior national team and the Olympics."

Hughes enjoys getting the chance to work with so much talent. "With the kids on a college crew, we do a lot of teaching," explained Hughes, a 1996 PU graduate, who coached the Tiger heavyweight freshmen program for eight years before taking over the lightweight program in 2005. "We try to make them into great athletes. With the guys on the national team, they are already great athletes and rowers.

But as Hughes will tell you, having all those stars on hand doesn't mean his coaching task is a walk in the park. "The major challenge is to find a way to bring everyone together and get their styles to mesh," asserted Hughes, whose boat includes Princeton standouts Alex Hearne and Will England.

Hughes is confident his boats will be in sync when they hit the water. "It's coming, the boats have a lot of horsepower," said Hughes, who guided the Tiger men's lightweight crew to a third-place finish in the Intercollegiate Rowing Association (IRA) national championship race this past spring.

"The exciting thing about the U-23s is that none of these boats have raced this year. It's not like at the senior level where some people are back and you have a sense what the teams are like."

With Hughes' record of success at the international level, the U.S. boats are a good bet to produce some exciting performances.

STONE AGE: Princeton University rowing star Gevvie Stone is all smiles after helping lead the Tiger women's open crew to a victory in the NCAA championship race this past spring. PU Star Stone Upholding Family Tradition As She Rows for U.S. in U-23 Competition

Both of her parents rowed for the U.S. national team but Gevvie Stone resisted the pull of the family pastime for years.

In her first two years of high school at the Winsor School in Boston, Stone's main sport was lacrosse. But realizing that she wasn't on track to be a lacrosse star at the college level, Stone took to the water for the Winsor crew program.

It didn't take long for Stone to show that rowing greatness was in her genes as she helped the Winsor women's varsity four with a coxswain to high national titles as a junior and a senior.

Heading to Princeton University in 2003, Stone achieved a national crown on the college level this past spring in her junior season as she helped the Tigers' top open crew to the NCAA championship.

This week, Stone is following in her parents' footsteps as she competes for the U.S. in the World Rowing Under-23 Championships in Hazewinkel, Belgium.

While Stone has unquestionably risen quickly in the crew world, she wasn't an instant success. "I was stuck with the novice crew with a lot of freshmen," said Stone with a laugh as she recalled her first season in the sport. "I had rowed a total of 12 times in summer camp so it wasn't my first time in the boat."

Being a national champion helped Stone fall in love with the sport. "Winning made the sport a lot more fun," said Stone, whose mother, Lisa Stone, was her high school coach.

"I trained really hard junior year. I had a good friend and we raced everyday after school ended against a pair that my mother was training for the nationals."

By the time she was ready for college, Stone was looking for a school where she could further develop her rowing skills.

"Once I switched to rowing I looked at colleges with respectable rowing programs," said Stone, a native of Newton, Mass. "I had a good visit at Princeton; the rowers seemed very friendly."

Once Stone got to Princeton, however, she realized that competing at the next level was serious business.

"Training through the whole year was a big difference," said Stone, who made the Tiger varsity women's open boat late in her sophomore season. "ERGing and being in the tank it was tough. Everything was more intense, a level harder."

This past spring, she starred at the second seat as the Tigers went undefeated and won the NCAA tile in convincing fashion, topping Cal by more than six seconds in the competition held at Mercer Lake in nearby West Windsor.

While Princeton entered the NCAA regatta as the favorite, Stone was on pins and needles. "You're nervous the whole time," explained Stone. "We hadn't rowed against four of the teams we went against in the finals; we didn't know what to expect. We had been rowing fast all season but we hadn't seen Washington or Cal."

Despite the nerves, Stone was not surprised that the senior-laden boat rose to the occasion. "We definitely had a really good race," recalled Stone. "We had been building toward that; we knew we had that race in us."

Stone, who survived a rigorous try-out-camp to make the U.S. squad, believes she and her national teammates have some really good racing in them.

"We have been able to focus much more on rowing," said Stone, who will be joined by Princeton teammate Devan Darby on the U.S. boat.

"There were no academic responsibilities and we're doing triple sessions some days. It's a lot more training, eating, and sleeping. We've had the final lineup together the last three weeks or so and we're getting faster every practice so that's exciting."

Stone is also excited as she looks ahead to her final Princeton campaign. "We're losing a lot of seniors but we have a lot of potential and a lot of people working real hard," asserted Stone.

"We have returning seniors who know what its like to work hard and move up and we can help with the transition. It'll be fun to see what we can do; it will definitely help me to have this extra rowing this summer."

No matter what happens in Belgium this week and in Princeton next season, there is no doubt that Stone has upheld her family tradition for rowing success.

Post 218 Falls Short of Playoffs But Sees Bright Future Ahead

Heading into last weekend, the Princeton Post 218 American Legion baseball team found itself in a dogfight as it looked to qualify for postseason play.

After a stirring 7-3 win over North Trenton Post 458 last Thursday, Princeton stood at 10-8 with four games to play as the regular season of Mercer County American Legion League (MCALL) hit the homestretch.

Post 218 needed to win all four of its remaining games to pass Bordentown Post 26 (13-9) for the fifth and final spot in the state Legion playoffs. Victories in three of the four games would land Princeton in a playoff with Post 26 for the playoff berth.

Having never qualified for postseason play in its history, Post 218 couldn't get over the hump once again as it fell three times over the weekend to end up 11-11 and two games behind Bordentown.

Post 218 put itself behind the eight-ball as it fell 10-0 to league champion Hamilton Post 31 on Friday. But led by a 3-for-3 day from Dan Etherton and two hits apiece from Mark Madden and Clint O'Brien together with a fine mound outing from Sean Pucciarelli, Princeton stayed alive with an 11-1 romp over Mitchell Davis 183 Saturday morning.

Later in the day, Post 218 was eliminated as it couldn't get the big hit in a 6-0 defeat at West Windsor. Showing fight as it played out the string on Sunday, Princeton gave third-place Ewing 314 a scare, falling 5-3 as Ewing pushed across two runs in the top of the seventh to break a 3-3 tie.

In reflecting on the frustrating finale, longtime Post 218 manager Tommy Parker had no qualms with how his club battled.

"I thought they played pretty good ball over the weekend," said Parker. "Against West Windsor, they hit the ball where we weren't and we hit the ball where they were; that's how the ball bounces sometime. Colin [Sarafin] pitched a really good game. Against Ewing, we played a helluva game. Mike [Russo] pitched a great game; we just left too many runners on base."

While Parker acknowledged that it was agonizing to again miss the playoffs, he sees a bright future for his team.

"It's frustrating but the great thing is that we have a young team," said Parker. "We are only losing four players. The lineup was made up of guys who were mainly sophomores and juniors."

The club's young players produced some gaudy numbers. Pucciarelli hit .457 with a team-high 32 hits. Shortstop Andrew Baxter hit .377 while outfielder Dan Etherton produced a .333 batting average. Mark Madden batted .339 with Clint O'Brien leading the team in runs scored (17) and RBIs (14).

"A lot of those guys were in the league leaders," said Parker. "I asked those guys to reflect on the season and think about what they could've done better. It's a good bunch of kids; I'm proud of them."

Parker was also proud of the contributions he got from such veterans as Logan Laughlin. "Logan was one of the better catchers in the league and he ended up as one of the better pitchers," said Parker, who also got some fine mound work this summer from Russo, Sarafin, and Matt Welsh.

In Parker's view, his young players have the potential to improve their games like Laughlin, who post a 1.01 ERA in his final Legion campaign.

"They need to work on their craft," said Parker. "They need to hit better in certain situations and they need to make that big pitch. They need to cut down on mental mistakes."

Ever the optimist, Parker is confident the lessons will sink in and the frustration of falling short this summer will prove to be a blessing in disguise down the road.

"They are a smart group of guys," said Parker. "The experience of going through things this year should help. This year it was some of the other teams that had been there and had that experience. I told them to hold their heads high and let's go get 'em next year."

P-C Babe Ruth 14s Make Progress, Going 3-2 in District 1 Tournament

With the Princeton-Cranbury Babe Ruth 14-year-old all-star team leading Hightstown-East Windsor 6-1 going into the final inning last Thursday in District 1 play, P-C catcher Tom Hrabchak wasn't satisfied.

Holding court in a pre-inning huddle, Hrabchak exhorted his teammates to not let up, leading them in a chant of "runs, runs" as the players readied themselves to take their turn at bat. P-C, though, didn't need any more runs as its pitching shut the door on Hightstown-East Windsor with the 6-1 score holding up as the final margin.

A night later, P-C could've used some extra runs as it absorbed a 24-1 loss to Nottingham in getting eliminated from the tournament.

Notwithstanding its finale, P-C manager David Etherton was happy with his club as it posted a 3-2 mark in the tournament.

"We had one player with a migraine and Steve [Etherton] had a fever all day; the players had played four games over the weekend and they were tired," said Etherton after the win over Hightstown-East Windsor. "We had to dig deep into our pitching rotation to get the job done and the kids did it."

In Etherton's view, the way Hrabchak digs deep every day has helped hold P-C together. "Tom has really stepped forward," asserted Etherton, whose squad went 2-2 in the District 1 tournament play last year.

"He manages his own workouts. At Princeton High this spring as a freshman, he played on both the freshman and junior varsity teams. He ended up catching three or four games a week. His heart is huge. He's our captain and he's earned that every step of the way."

P-C had several other players who stepped up in addition to Hrabchak. "Steve has been our closer this year, if a couple of guys get in, there's no question he's going to come in, like Mariano Rivera," said Etherton, whose team's only run in the loss to Nottingham came on a mammoth homer by Trevor Barsamian over the wall in left center.

"Jordan Metro is hitting .867 in the tournament, he's been huge, Colin Graydon has been whacking everything too. I moved him up to No. 1 in the order because he was hitting everything."

Collectively, the squad showed improvement fielding-wise. "Defense is one of the things we've been working on," added Etherton. "We play in a summer league [in Hunterdon] and they've all been getting at-bats and they've been playing different positions in the field. They've all improved at fielding. A lot of these games are won and lost on errors and we aren't giving up the errors."

Etherton is hoping that progress will benefit both his players and the Princeton High baseball program over the long haul. "I'm trying to develop everybody everywhere so when they get to high school they are exposed to other positions," explained Etherton.

"The kids get put in one position early on but that may not be where they play in high school. They'll be better fielders and better hitters when they get to high school."

POWER SURGE: Princeton-Cranbury 14-year-old all star Trevor Barsamian takes a mighty cut in P-C's 6-1 win over Hightstown-East Windsor last Thursday in District 1 tournament play. A night later, Barsamian swatted a mammoth homer to account for P-C's only run as it fell 24-1 to Nottingham to get eliminated from the tourney. P-C posted an overall mark of 3-2 in the tournament. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

Sophisticated horse players will tell you that placing a bet on the basis of a horse's name is not a wise move. But the mysterious forces at work in the world of gambling might beg to differ. Take the seventh race at Aqueduct on April 15, 1992, when the winner was Tax Tip. The winner in the seventh race at Gulfstream Park on March 16, 1996, the day before St. Patrick's Day — Irish Conquest, of course. Or, how about the winner of the Breeder's Cup at Lone Star Park on Halloween eve, 2004 — Ghostzapper. Then there were the winners of the first three races at Laurel Park on Ash Wednesday, 2006 — Vagabond Saint, Halo's Slate Clean and Nancy's Grace.

Sometimes a major leaguer will acknowledge his home run with a long stare from the plate and a slow job around the diamond. But why did it take Boston's Tony Graffanino more than five minutes to circle the bases after homering against Toronto in a September 2005 game? Turns out teammate Gabe Kapler tore his Achilles tendon while running just ahead of Graffanino and crumpled to the ground. Graffanino stopped midbase path to avoid passing Kapler, who was attended to, helped off the field and replaced by a pitch runner, before Graffanino completed his trot - all permissable in the rule book.

Four players in NBA history have pulled down at least 20 boards in one game without scoring a single point. The most recent was Denver's Reggie Evans in a March 2006 win over Toronto. Two others who did it once were Philadelphia's Clyde Lee in 1974 and the Lakers' Happy Hairston in 1973. But get this — the fourth rebounding specialist did it an amazing seven times. The player? None other than the inimitable Dennis Rodman.

Davison Relishing Team Chemistry As George's Goes for Title Repeat

The temperature hovered around 90 last Monday night but it took a while for George's Roasters and Ribs to warm up as it faced Hoagie Haven in the Princeton Recreation Department Men's Summer Basketball League.

George's, the defending league champion which has lost only once this summer, struggled to build a 23-15 halftime lead over 1-5 Hoagie Haven at the sweltering Community Park courts.

But after an impromptu halftime walk-through led by coach Bobby Henning, George's caught fire after the break, reeling off a 15-1 run as it cruised to a 65-40 win and improved to 7-1 on the season.

In other action last Monday, Merrill Lynch topped Upper Makefield 53-45 to improve to 6-2 while Princeton Youth Sports moved to 2-6 with a 59-55 win over Where2Ball.com.

As he reflected on George's win, former Princeton High and College of New Jersey star Bobby Davison admitted that his team was out of sync in the early going.

"Part of it was the heat," said Davison, a 6'5, 215-pound forward. "We haven't had Noah [Savage] and Kevin [Steuerer] the last two weeks and we had to get them back into it. We also didn't have our big guy Scott [Findlay]. It took us a little while; then we got back to the old days."

Davison acknowledged that the halftime advice from Henning helped fuel George's big second half. "We have a great coach in Bobby Henning," asserted Davison, referring to Henning, another former TCNJ standout.

"He's our age but he settles us down; he knows how to control the game. He was just giving us a little insight in how to break the zone."

That insight didn't fall on deaf ears as most of the George's squad has played together in the Rec League for years with many of them TCNJ products.

"We've had the same core of guys for five years," said Davison. "Two years ago we won the regular season title but came up short in the playoffs. Last year we won the whole thing. This year, hopefully we can put it all together; we have all the pieces."

With the playoffs starting next Monday and such teams as Merrill Lynch and MPF & S (6-1) both playing well, Davison hopes that his team's playoff know-how will make the difference.

"I think our experience and just playing together for so long is going to help us through everything," asserted Davison. "We're also a pretty talented group of guys with players like Noah and Scott."

Davison is content to play a supporting role for George's as it chases a second straight league title.

"I'm a role player; I try to get the ball to Noah, Scott, and Kevin," said Davison, who scored 323 points and had 410 rebounds in his TCNJ career.

"I get rebounds and I try be a coach on the court. I just try to do my best to do whatever I can to help us win another league championship."

And for Davison, playing with his boys has rewards deeper than wins on the court. "It's good; it keeps me young," said a chuckling Davison, a Law and Justice major at TCNJ who is pursuing a career in law enforcement.

"Now that college is over I can come out here and play with Noah, who I played with in high school, and the TCNJ guys. It's good; it helps keep us all close."

That special bond could just bring George's another crown.

—Bill Alden

ON FIRE: George's Roasters and Ribs center Scott Findlay powers to the basket in action earlier this summer in the Princeton Recreation Department Men's Summer Basketball League. Findlay, a former star at The College of New Jersey, has provided the inside punch for George's, the defending league champions. With a league-best record of 7-1, George's will be tough to knock off in the year's playoffs, which start next Monday evening at the Community Park courts.

Former PU Star Bertoli New PDS Hockey Coach

Former Princeton University men's hockey star and current Trenton Titans standout Scott Bertoli has been named as the new head coach of the Princeton Day School boys' ice hockey program.

Bertoli, a 1999 PU graduate, replaces Chris Barcless, who was asked to resign this spring in the wake of a controversy over the activities of a booster group connected with the program.

In addition to coaching PDS, Bertoli will continue to play with the Titans. Last season, he scored 67 points for the Titans on 20 goals and 47 assists.

Bertoli will be assisted by George Bosak, who has been a back-up goaltender for the Titans. PDS has won the state Prep hockey title eight times in the last nine years including this past season when the Panthers blanked Morristown-Beard 3-0 in the title game.

WINNING MIX: The Carnegie Lake Rowing Association (CLRA) mixed eight churns through its home course at the club's annual summer regatta. The CLRA won the team title at the competition, earning the Heebink Bowl. The Capital Rowing Club of Washington D.C. placed second with the Swan Creek Rowing Club of Lambertville taking third. The event attracted 30 rowing clubs and more than 300 competitors. The CLRA is currently accepting applications for its Learn to Row program which takes place from September 16 through Thanksgiving Day. For more information on the program, log on to the club website at www.clra.com.

OBITUARIES

Samuel Thurm

Samuel Thurm, 88, of Princeton, died July 10 following a long illness.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., the son of a tailor, he attended Erasmus Hall High School, graduated from Dartmouth in 1939, and attended Columbia Business School. He left Columbia to serve in the South Pacific as a captain in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II. After the war he completed his business degree and went to work at Young & Rubicam for George Gallup.

On leaving Y&R to become media director at Lever Brothers, he became closely involved with TV shows such as I Love Lucy and Father Knows Best. Rising through the ranks at Lever, he became senior vice president in charge of advertising, in which capacity he had Lever take the lead in casting African Americans, Asian Americans and other minorities in national advertising campaigns. An article in Newsweek described him as "the Branch Rickey of nighttime television."

Recognized by his peers as an industry leader, he became the only person ever to hold the head position at the Association of National Advertisers, The American Advertising Federation, and the Advertising Research Foundation. He also served as vice-chairman of the Advertising Council.

He left Lever in 1973 to head the Washington office of the Association of National Advertisers, and remained there until his retirement in 1987. Following his retirement from full-time work he taught advertising as adjunct professor at Florida Atlantic University.

He continued teaching until he was 81, saying that working with students kept him young.

He was an avid golfer, sports fan, and crossword enthusiast, and doting grandfather.

In 1940 he married Ruth-Elaine Blum, with whom he had two sons. After her death in 1989 he married Arlene Bruck of Montreal and Palm Beach.

He is survived by his wife Arlene; two sons, Andrew of Princeton and Allen of Los Angeles; two stepdaughters, Maggie Bruck and Nancy Bruck; two grandchildren; and two step-grandchildren.

Burial was private.

A memorial service is planned for September in Princeton.

Arrangements were by Orland's Funeral Home, Ewing.

Elaine H. Wert

Elaine H. Wert, 79, of Manasquan, formerly of Princeton, died July 12 at Care One in East Brunswick.

Born and raised in Princeton, she was a resident of Kendall Park from 1957 to 1998 before moving to Manasquan in 1998. In Kendall Park she was a member of St. Augustine of Canterbury Church; in Manasquan, a member of St. Denis Church.

The wife of the late Albert M. Wert Jr., she is survived by two sons, Albert M. III of Monmouth Junction, and Jeffrey M. of Boomer, N.C.; two daughters, Kathleen Smith of Dayton and Susan E. Froats of Monmouth Junction; six grandchildren; and one great-grandson.

The funeral was July 15 at M.J. Murphy Funeral Home, Monmouth Junction. It was followed by a Mass of Christian Burial at St. Augustine of Canterbury Church. Entombment was at Franklin Memorial Park, North Brunswick.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, Tenn. 38105.

Aaron Familant

Aaron ("Arcky") Familant, 85, of Monroe Township, died July 10.

He was a leader of the credit union movement for nearly 50 years. As treasurer and board member of Progressive Credit Union, he took the credit union from a local Bronx institution to national prominence. He also served on the boards of the Excelsior, Central, Greater New York, and Empire Corporate Federal Credit Unions. He was president of the New York State Credit Union League and served as a director to the Credit Union National Association. He was the first credit union professional to serve on the New York State Banking Board, having been appointed by Gov. Mario Cuomo.

He was a lifelong member and officer of the Bessarabian Young Men's Benevolent Association.

Predeceased by his wife, Rosalind, he is survived by a daughter, Linda Meisel of Princeton; a son, Robert of New York City; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

The funeral service was July 12 at The Riverside Chapel, New York City.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Rosalind "Mimi" Familant Fund, Jewish Community Foundation of Princeton Mercer Bucks, 4 Princess Road, Suite 206, Lawrenceville 08648.

Michel Jean Martin

Michel Jean Martin, 62, of Plainsboro, died July 14 at the University Medical Center at Princeton.

Born in Perpignan, France, he came to Princeton Junction in 1983 and moved to Plainsboro in 1986.

He graduated from the School of Chemistry of Lyon, France, and the School of Chemical Engineering of Nancy, France.

He was a vice president of sales and new product development at Huber Inc., in Havre de Grace, Md., for the last 15 years. He was previously CEO of U.S. Operations for SNPE Inc. in Paris.

He is survived by his wife Annie (Besson) Martin and a daughter, Carole Martin of New York City.

A Mass of a Christian Burial will be celebrated at 10 a.m. today, July 19 at Queenship of Mary Church, 19 Dey Road, Plainsboro. Burial will be in Princeton Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the University Medical Center at Princeton Oncology Department, 253 Witherspoon Street, Princeton 08540.

Arrangements are under the direction of The Mather-Hodge Funeral Home.

Bulletin Notes

The Nassau Presbyterian Church has announced the appointment of its new Director of Music, Noel D. Werner. A service of installation and reception is planned for a fall date yet to be determined.

Mr. Werner, who will succeed Ken Kelley, holds a bachelor of music degree in church music and organ performance summa cum laude from Westminster Choir College, a master of music in organ performance with distinction from Indiana University, and a master of theological studies summa cum laude from Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis. During the past 22 years he has served in a variety of church music positions in Pennsylvania, Indiana, and New Jersey. He comes to Nassau Church from the Central Presbyterian Church in Summit, where he had been minister of music since 1995.

Mr. Werner's wife, Wendi, earned her master of divinity degree at Drew Theological Seminary and is currently the interim pastor of Christian education at Basking Ridge Presbyterian Church.

The First Baptist Church, at John Street and Paul Robeson Place, will host a Vacation Bible School from July 24 to July 28 at 6 p.m. Titled "Jesus Family Reunion," the classes are for pre-school children through adults. Children under 5 years of age must be accompanied by an adult.

For more information, call (609) 924-0877.

The Princeton Center for Yoga & Health will host an evening of Kabbalah Kirtan Hebrew Chanting with Philadelphia performers Yofiyah and Judah Prince, and New Jersey artist Karttikeya on Sunday, July 30 at 6 p.m. Admission will be $10.

Kabbalah Kirtan is a fusion of Indian and Middle Eastern musical form with Jewish mystical content — "a trippy, trancy, sensuous journey to ecstasy," according to Yofiyah.

The Princeton Center for Yoga & Health hosts various guest performers for concerts, annual sing-alongs and chanting experiences. "As one of our guest performers, David Brahinsky has said, 'When you are singing, you are happy'," noted PCYH director Deborah Metzger. "We invite the community to experience the power of one of the original vibrational languages, Hebrew. You don't have to be Jewish to enjoy the experience!"

The Princeton Center for Yoga & Health is located in the Montgomery Professional Center at 50 Vreeland Drive, Suite 506, Skillman. For more information, call (609) 924-7294 or visit www.princetonyoga.com.

Summer at Old Cleveland Farm

There once was a U.S. President who owned a farm in nearby Hopewell. His name was Grover Cleveland. Local history reveals that President Cleveland sought out a country place where he could have chickens for fresh eggs, harvest an abundance of vegetables and explore nature in the fields and woods he owned. Today, the house Grover Cleveland acquired in 1898 sits on five acres and offers the storybook setting that Cleveland enjoyed. Original architectural details and historic outbuildings are still part of this country retreat. The move-in quality of this home is reflected in the wonderful improvements that have taken place between 1952 and 2005. Whether you're yearning for a Martha Stewart country house or just looking for a classic gracious home with privacy, the Grover Cleveland Farmhouse property is the best of both worlds. Located in an estate area of Hopewell with a Princeton address, the home is just minutes to Palmer Square, cultural venues and area schools. The crickets are singing and the butterflies are putting on a show. Come and enjoy!

NOTHING CAN BE BETTER than living in the heart of Princeton Boro if you love to walk uptown! Set back from the street, the elegant brick front of this house offers just a hint of the treat that awaits you. Old-fashioned craftsmanship is found on the exterior, as is evidenced by the quality masonry, breathtakingly beautiful gardens, circular drive, and superior ironwork on the "service" gate. Inside, the welcoming arched entry opens to a formal living room with fireplace, niches, and built-ins. The dining room has lovely built-ins too! The kitchen has been updated, as well, and cleverly retains the original cabinetry which meshes beautifully with granite counters and new appliances. Also on this level are a perfect breakfast room and a new family room addition with French doors opening to a sweet screened-in porch and terrace. Upstairs, the second floor continues the sensitive combining of old and new, with the utterly charming original master suite, dressing room, bath combination, two more bedrooms and a new master suite designed so beautifully that it appears to have been there always. The installation of a vintage stained glass window provides the coup de grace for this very special space. Children of all ages will love the third floor get-away, with its ceiling the shape of which childhood memories are made. A jewel of a home in a jewel of a location! $1,500,000

On land once part of the Drumthwacket estate, this 2.26 acre gem is tucked away in a quiet oasis of perennial gardens and towering beech trees just one mile from Palmer Square. Its residence, set well back from the road, was built in the 1960s by a renowned Princeton builder for his own family. Bordered by Princeton Battlefield Park on one side, lovely vistas include an arched stone bridge, a reminder of its original ownership, crossing a meandering brook and manicured lawns sweeping down the long driveway to a natural pond. In the house, walls of windows frame the views and fill the rooms with natural light, heightening the inviting ambiance and comfortable ramble of its main level floor plan. There are large rooms for entertaining and intimate spaces for quiet family pleasures. The formal living room has a fireplace and adjacent are the formal dining room, library/music room, family room, powder room, country kitchen, and a secluded home-office/au pair suite with fireplace, full bath and separate entrance. A large master bedroom suite features his and her walk-in closets, the master bath and a study area. A six-sided room year-round hot tub/spa room opens to the garden. On the second floor, two bedrooms and a bath. Open House Sunday July 23rd 1-3 pm. Directions: Nassau St., to Stockton St., past Edgerstoune traffic light to driveway with stone pillars, #470.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Tod Peyton

A LOCK BOX

There are many factors that affect how quickly you sell your home and how much profit you make from the sale. Putting your home on the market at the right price, making sure it is in prime "showing" condition and finding a real estate agent with whom you feel comfortable are all vital components of a successful sale. However, if your home is not easily accessible to prospective buyers, all of your hard work could be undermined.

When preparing to take a buyer on the open home circuit, an agent usually tries to focus the search by creating a list of available properties based upon specifications provided by the buyer. Since time constraints are often a problem, the agent will initially choose homes from the list that are easily accessible.

An interested buyer needs the freedom to visit a home more than once in order to effectively compare properties, so both agents and buyers resist viewing restrictions. Homes that are equipped with a lock box and flexible on appointments are favored by realtors, solicit greater activity and as a result will sell faster. After viewing homes that are easily available, the agent will then review properties that require more effort to visit. Why take the chance of missing the first round? Having a lock box ensures you won't be passed over.

For dependable individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Please feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.
